ODESSA FAIR.

As usual Odessa was one of the best of the smaller fairs held in the district. The attendance was large and the exhibits plentiful and well worthy of attention. During a heavy thunderstorm on

TOWN COUNCIL.

Council Chamber,
Oct. 4th, 1909.

Council met in regular session on Monday evening, Mayor T. W. Simpson presiding.

Present—Reeve Rutlan and Councillors Bogart, Alexander and Burrows. The minutes of the last regular and special sessions were read and confirmed.

A communication was read from Edward A. Bond, president of the Napanee Water Works Co., in which he stated he would so arrange his business as to be able to be in Napanee during the latter part of October when all the essential minute details in connection with the Waterworks By-law could be mutually arranged to the satisfaction of both parties, before submitting the by-law to the ratepayers in January.

Considerable discussion took place over the contents of this communication.

Reeve Rutlan, one of the members of the committee appointed by the council to have a contract drafted, stated he had been of the opinion that the contract drafted had been mutually agreed upon, by both parties, except a few changes in the schedule of charges, and he did not see the necessity of opening the question again.

Coun. Burrows stated he was somewhat in the dark in reference to this contract. He knew nothing about it whatever. He would like very much to have a copy of it, so that he might carefully look it over and be prepared to vote on it when it was presented before the council for approval.

Moved by Coun. Burrows, seconded by Coun. Bogart, that the Mayor and Reeve be empowered to draft a reply to Mr. Bond's letter. Carried.

Chief of Police Graham asked that the council have a telephone installed in his home, in order that he might be more easily reached during the night. Owing to circumstances he was compelled to reside some little distance from the centre of the town.

Referred to the Police Committee to report.

A communication was read from Mr. Harvey Warner, asking that an arc lamp be placed on Dundas street, at the corner near the Public Library. Fyled.

A communication was read from Chas. A. Walters, secretary of The Napanee Light, Heat and Power Co., stating that the commissioners have not the funds on hand to have their poles painted this year, and would have to ask the council to make an appropriation for the same next year. Fyled.

A communication from the Canadian Municipal Journal, Montreal, offering to supply the members of the council with a copy of their journal for the balance of the year for $1.50, or until December, 1910 for $1.00 each, was ordered fyled.

A communication from the House of Providence, Kingston, was read. Enclosed with the communication was an account of $242.13 for care of indigent people from Napanee.

Referred to the Finance Committee. T. D. Scrimshaw and a large number of other residents petitioned the council asking for a grant of money towards the maintenance and repair of foot bridge, crossing the river at the bottom of the falls. Fyled.

M. J. Warner and several other residents on John street petitioned the council for an arc lamp to replace the smaller one now used at the corner of John and Thomas streets. Fyled.

GERMAN DREADNAUGHTS

THE WESTPHALEN, FIRST OF NEW TYPE, NOW AT SEA.

Three Other Battleships are Under Construction With Heavier Guns.

The first German Dreadnought battleship, the Westphalen, is now completed and has left the shipyards of the Weser Aktiengesellschaft for the open sea. She was laid down in 1907 and was launched on July 1, 1903. According to the German naval programme she was to have been completed in November next, so that her construction has been accelerated by fully two months, says a Berlin letter.

Like her sister ships the Rheinland, Posen and Nassau, the Westphalen has a displacement of about 27,960 tons, with a length of 472 feet and a beam of 82 feet. She draws 26 feet of water and has an indicated horse-power of 24,000, giving a speed of 19.5 knots.

She has a complete belt of Krupp steel 11.5 inches thick amidships and tapering to 6 inches forward and 4 inches aft. Her cost is approximately $9,250,000. The Westphalen and her sister ships are destined for the North Sea, their draught making it impossible for them to enter the Baltic through the Kiel Canal.

A Wilhelmshaven correspondent dealing with Germany's extensive naval programme says that the Ersatz Oldenburg, which was laid down in the first week of October last, will be launched at Wilhelmshafen in the presence of the Kaiser on September 18 or 25. The completed displacement of the ship will be 19,000 tons—that is, slightly less than that of the British St. Vincent. She will, however,

BE MORE POWERFUL.

For her armament and that of her two sister ships, the Ersatz Siegfried and the Ersatz Beowulf, which are to be launched in November the German Admiralty has for the first time since 1880 adopted the 12 inch gun. Not only will twelve guns of this calibre be mounted as compared with the ten of the St. Vincent, but the guns are far more powerful than those of the British ship.

The shell of the St. Vincent's 12 inch gun weighs 850 pounds. That of the German gun will weigh 982 pounds. While the ten guns of the St. Vincent will give her a fire of 5,000 pounds the Ersatz Oldenburg will have a fire of 11,784 pounds. In addition the German ship will carry twelve 6.7 inch guns (132 pound shell) and twenty-two 4.1 inch 38 pounders. The total gun-fire of the Ersatz Oldenburg will amount to 14,204 pounds, compared with the St. Vincent's 9,120 pounds. The Ersatz Oldenburg is to be pushed forward in order that she may be completed by January, 1911. This is six months before the date originally set.

The Nassau is now nearing completion and will be well on with her trials before the end of the year. The four ships of the Nassau class will be armed with twelve 11 inch, twelve 5.9 inch and sixteen 3.4 inch guns. The weights of the shells fired from these guns are 760 pounds, 121 pounds and 20 pounds respectively, so that the

Another interesting contrast is afforded by the relative expenditure on new construction and armaments of the several nations ten years ago and now:

Russia.....	3,149,014	1,822,237
Italy.....	1,156,921	2,190,707
Japan.....		2,494,361

This year the expenditure on new construction and armaments for the British fleet is rather less than in Germany, or only slightly in excess of the outlay in the United States.

This year the seven great Powers are devoting £120,800,435 to naval armaments. The recent increase in expenditure has been mainly in Germany and the United States. In Great Britain the total expenditure this year is less than it was in 1903 and 1904, as the following figures show:

1900	$29,998,529	1905	$33,151,841
1901	30,981,312	1906	31,472,087

1904	36,859,681	1909	35,142,700

The secrets of the new Dreadnought, which is to be laid down at Portsmouth soon after the Neptune has been launched, are being carefully guarded, but despite the precautions taken it is known that there will be important departures in the design of the ship. For one thing she is to have 13.5 inch guns as a main armament, 6 inch guns as a secondary battery, and the torpedoes fired from her submerged tubes will be 22 inches in diameter and will possess an effective range of five miles. The ship will be longer and much heavier than the St. Vincent.

THE CHOLERA IN RUSSIA

COURSE OF THE EPIDEMIC IN ST. PETERSBURG.

Those Attacked are Among the Ignorant Who do Not Boil Drinking Water.

A statistical record of the cholera situation in St. Petersburg is issued daily by the Epidemiological Department, writes a St. Petersburg correspondent. It is glanced at by the reading public with the same casual curiosity that is given to the published chart of the weather bureau. In the town hospital there are 313 cholera patients. Since the epidemic began fifteen months ago 14,855 persons have been taken ill in the capital, 5,759 have died and 8,822 have been cured.

The absence of emotion is readily explained. The reading public has scarcely been touched by its ravages; it is the non-reading, the illiterate public that furnishes the victims. The outbreak began among the waterside laborers living in the lower depths of the social fabric, and among them and their neighbors it has practically remained. If ever a preventable scourge has been allowed to destroy the human body it is the St. Petersburg cholera epidemic of this summer and last.

Dr. Possadsky, chief physician of the cholera barracks, says that the number of cases he has had from households living in decent precautionary conditions he could count on the fingers of his hands. The American, British, French and German colonies here have so far none of their members belonging to the unskilled labor of the port. Some Scandinavians have been stricken among the trading vessels. The one cause of infection that the medical authorities admit is the drinking of unboiled water, and the only instruction issued is a red lettered bill posted on thousands of the walls of the city, "Don't drink unboiled water." As the likeliest victims are people who don't read at all, the instruction has had to be circulated among them by word of mouth.

The prefect of the capital, Gen. Pratchevsky, has placed barrels of boiled water on stands at street corners in the shipping and industrial districts. St. Petersburg has a floating population, exclusive of seafaring crews, which amounts to over 20,000 in the summer months, whose living quarters are on the great barges in the canals; they come from Lake Lagoda mostly with wood fuel for the winter or with bricks and cement for the builders. Their homes are on the deck-covered cabins of the barges with a pair of little windows looking out of the square stern.

Medical students volunteered to go around among them and explain the need for boiling the water they drink. When the bargees learned that the young men had the Prefect's authorization to come on board they suspected police interference and threw some of them into the river. They and the navies held it rank nonsense that they could swallow a microbe.

He afterward found not only the stain of the dye, but the colored sawdust itself inside the reservoir. There is a municipal deadlock over the question of supplying new filters.

Interesting Gossip About Some Prominent People.

The millionaire Duke of Westminster is said to possess a magnificent set of silver-plate which is declared by experts to be the finest in the world. But in the matter of quantity, however, his Grace of Cumberland is credited to have as much as twelve tons!

It has been said that the young Queen of Holland has rapidly aged of late, and is losing that beauty and cheerful youthfulness which have endeared her so much to the hearts of her subjects. As a matter of fact, however, Her Majesty never looked better than she does to-day. She indulges in forms of exercise which add grace to her figure and carefully studies her complexion. Her Majesty is said to have adopted the custom from the Dutch Indies of taking lemon baths. The lemon bath is made as follows: Five lemons, cut into slices, are left to soak in a basin of water for half an hour. The lemon water is added to that in the bath, and the whole stirred vigorously.

An amusing story is told concerning King Louis of Bavaria. His Majesty was much annoyed on one occasion when the soldier on guard at the palace gates neglected to present arms. The truth was, the soldier did not know His Majesty by sight. "Why don't you present arms?" the latter asked, angrily. "Do you know to whom you are indebted for your daily bread?" The sentry glared angrily at the King, and, imagining him to be the army baker, replied, "So you are the miserable son of a baker who furnishes the soldiers with bread, are you? Well, I should like to have you by yourself in some quiet place. I'd spread your ungainly anatomy over three Kingdoms! I'd make dough of you!"

Captain H. Edward Greenstreet, commander of the New Zealand Shipping Company's twin-screw passenger steamship Rimutaka, recently arrived in London after completing his seventy-first round-the-world voyage, and has now started on his seventy-second globe-encircling voyage, in the confident expectation that, before he comes ashore for good, he will have reeled off a century of such trips. As he is still in the prime of life, there seems no reason why the aim he has set before him should not be realized. Each voyage from London to New Zealand means 25,000 miles of steaming. Then there is from 1,000 to 2,000 miles on the New Zealand coast, so that each round trip really means from 26,000 to 27,000 miles. Therefore, if Captain Greenstreet completes his hundredth trip, he will have travelled 2,700,000 miles.

A good story is told of the early days of Rear-Admiral Egerton, who has just been appointed Commander-in-Chief at the Cape of Good Hope. As Captain Egerton, the Admiral took part in the bombard-

The four ships of the Nassau class will be armed with twelve 11 inch, twelve 5.9 inch and sixteen 3.4 inch guns. (The fire of the Dreadnought, with ten 12 inch and twenty-four 3 inch guns, is 8,788 pounds, and of the St. Vincent class, now completing with ten 12 inch and twenty 4 inch guns, 9,320 pounds.)

The displacement of the Nassau is a couple of hundred tons less than that of the Dreadnought and 4,500 tons less than the St. Vincent's. The Nassau's twelve 11 inch weapons are paired in turrets, two being placed on the centre line, one forward and one aft and one at each corner of the superstructure. All the big guns are on the same level.

The Nassau can bring eight guns to bear on the broadside and six ahead or astern. In addition she has six 5.9 inch guns mounted on each side on the main deck behind thick armor.

According to official information the removal of the first squadron of the German high seas fleet from Kiel to Wilhelmshaven will take place on April 1 of next year. As the result of this disposition the defence of the latter port will be strengthened by eight large battleships, two armored cruisers and three smaller cruisers. The garrison is also to be increased by 8,000 men. Wilhelmshaven will thus be rendered one of the strongest bases of the German fleet.

It is now nearly two years since the German Government decided to remove the naval base from Kiel to Wilhelmshaven, which possesses a fine dry dock capable of accommodating the largest battleships. The workshops of the imperial dock are perhaps the finest of their kind in the world, being fitted with the best machinery that engineering skill has been able to devise.

Wilhelmshaven has long been the headquarters of the German torpedo and submarine flotilla. For some years extensive alterations and improvements have been carried out there.

A SUM OF $7,500,000 has been expended upon the docks, wharves and such as is to be devoted to the cutting of a channel through the island of Schlesien, which lies at the mouth of the harbor. The enclosed harbor has an area of 170 acres. It is the Government's intention to concentrate the greatest strength of the navy at Wilhelmshaven, leaving the weaker units in the Baltic.

The British Government has just issued a statement giving a return of the naval expenditure of the principal naval powers, showing their total expenditure in each of the last ten years, their expenditure on new construction, including armament, and the amount of their new construction in each of those years expressed in tonnage. Making a contrast between 1900 and the present year the figures of the total naval expenditure of the several powers are very re-

In Turkestan every wedding engagement begins with the payment of a substantial consideration to the girl's parents. If the girl jilts her lover the engagement gift has to be returned, unless the parents have another daughter to give as a substitute. The plan is said to work well, and results in few divorces.

The last time a British soldier was shot for disobedience of orders is believed to have been during the month of April, 1860, when a private of the Fifth Bengal Regiment was court-martialled and shot for disobeying the orders of a lance-corporal, by refusing with two others to take a comrade to the guard-room. The only who was shot was on duty at the time.

A LESSON IN LOGIC.

Illustrated by the Lord Thomas Erskine.

It is only within the memory of living man that legislation has undertaken to protect domestic animals from the cruelty of their owners. Ownership has held to be absolute by most, but there was one man in England a hundred years ago who could demonstrate the untenable nature of this theory. This man was Thomas Erskine, one of the greatest lawyers and advocates of his age. A tradition survives at Hampstead, the residence of Lord Erskine, which Mr. Charles G. Harper has put into his book, "Kara! Nooks Round London," and which shows how this legal authority would have administered more recent laws.

It is related that the celebrated Lord Erskine, walking one day on Hampstead Heath, saw a raffanly driver shamefully thrashing a miserably ill-cared for horse.

My lord demonstrated with the driver on the cruelty of it; whereupon the fellow retorted, "It's my own; mayn't I use it as I please," and started whacking the wretched animal worse than ever.

Erskine, greatly annoyed, laid his walking-stick over the shoulders of the offender, who, croaking and grumbling, asked my lord—this is the drawing-room version, not a verbatim report, which would read rather differently—what business he had to touch him with the stick.

"Why," said Erskine, "the stick's my own; mayn't I use it as I please."

MANY YEARS OF WAR.

Not counting the numerous Indian outbreaks that are not classed as wars, the United States spent about 30 per cent. of the 120 years since 1789 in war. The United States has had six foreign wars and the greatest civil war known to history. The amount expended on American pensions has been greater than the amounts spent by some of the greatest nations on their armies. In 1908 the United States disbursed in pensions the enormous sum of $153,073,086, while the net cost of the British army and its operations for 1908-9 will amount to only $125,800,000.

THAT MIGHT KILL THEM.

"We so big and strong and that only a magnified speck in a bottle"—when they were shown organisms in ordinary water—"it is impossible that it could hurt us!"

When Prof. Metchnikoff of the Pasteur Institute in Paris was here in early summer his advice was "cook everything." At his idea students went among the inmates of the night refuges and workmen's eating houses and gave graphic demonstrations of elementary bacteriology.

Often they were followed by bigoted religious sectarians of the stamp of the late Father John of Cronstadt's Order of Jesuites, who declared that the doctor from Paris had brought the poison with him in a bottle to kill off the faithful Russians. An assistant doctor on the big island in the lake of Psokoff was nearly mauled to death by the islanders. He used to fish from a boat in his spare time and they declared that he brought the disease out of the lake; when they had sent him alone on a boat to the mainland they tore down the cholera barracks and took their sick people home again.

The astonishing rarity of infection among people visiting patients is ascribed to the established record that cholera victims are persons who have themselves swallowed contaminated water.

In the Archangel province where leases have broken out among the shipping from St. Petersburg and the large living workmen in the summer wood cutting traffic people have taken to drinking a mixture of tar and turpentine as a prophylactic. Some people believe in shooting guns from their front doors at

THE INVISIBLE SPECTRE.

Educated people have come to see that the collective precaution rests with themselves. A scabrous hand in one of the best restaurants in the capital died of cholera. A few days later a buffet attendant at the Moscow depot, none of the Moscow railroad was taken ill and died next day. They remained isolated cases in their respective establishments and were unquestionably due to drinking unclean water from the kitchen tap.

The history of the epidemic is accepted as beginning with a case of Asiatic cholera latent in a person who had come to St. Petersburg. The cholera tradition in St. Petersburg is that an epidemic lasts no less and no more than two years. According to the records it has been so in all previous visitations; whether that is the maximum destructive period of any cholera infected medium is not stated.

M. Metchnikoff warned the people here of the length of time the human body can carry the cholera bacillus without the disease declaring itself. He cited a case which germinated for fifty-six days. His warning was addressed to the people who during the fortnight in spring when there were no fresh cases supposed that the length and severity of the winter, by shutting the people off by the ice from direct access to the river, would freeze out the disease altogether.

New Zealand coast, so that a round trip really means from 26,000 to 27,000 miles. Therefore, if Captain Greenstreet completes his hundredth trip, he will have travelled 2,700,000 miles.

A good story is told of the early days of Rear-Admiral Egerton, who has just been appointed Commander-in-Chief at the Cape of Good Hope. As Captain Egerton, the Admiral took part in the bombardment of the Sultan of Zanzibar's Palace, and no one was more strict in enforcing the order against looting. After Captain Egerton's vessel, St. George, had returned to Simon's Bay Mrs. Egerton celebrated a birthday, and her husband's servant, who had been with Captain Egerton on the Zanzibar Expedition, came to her and asked leave to offer her a birthday present. Permission being readily accorded, the servant handed her a parcel, which, when Mrs. Egerton opened it, was found to contain half-a-dozen silver table-forks, all bearing the badge of the Sultan of Zanzibar. The artless offender had to be reprimanded and the forks returned to the Sultan. The man was also told that the master-at-arms would search his quarters, but, needless to say, nothing further could be found.

The life-story of Sir Rudolph Slatin, Inspector-General of the Sudan, reads like a romance of the Middle Ages. As a boy of seventeen Slatin left Vienna to become a clerk in a commercial house in Cairo. The keen eye of General Gordon singled him out, and at twenty-three the Austrian clerk became Governor of Darfur. He took made a name for himself. "The Hammer of the Arabs" he was called, for he was one of the bravest of fighters. He had only been Governor of Darfur a few months when the Mahdi swept down upon his province. Twenty-seven times did Slatin drive the enemy back. But numbers told in the end, and he was overpowered. He was held prisoner by the Mahdi for twelve years, during which time he suffered terrible indignities. Then he escaped with a prisoner and two nags, and there was no happier man in all Egypt when the British forces swept away Mahdism. Some time ago it was rumored that Sir Rudolph, who is a confirmed bachelor, was going to marry. He was asked if the report was true. "I marry!" asked Sir Rudolph, with a smile. "No, thank you—I have been a prisoner for twelve years—never again!"

FIRST USE OF IRON.

As a result of his interesting investigations, Dr. Ridgeway concludes that the smelting of iron originated in Central Europe, and especially in the region known as Noricum, equivalent to modern Austria and Bavaria, says the London Globe. In Egypt it can be traced back to the ninth century B. C., and in Libya to about 450 B. C. First mention of its use in China goes back to 400 B. C., while in Uganda it is said to have been in use only some five or six centuries. The above date for the first use of iron in Egypt refers to the metal obtained by smelting. The use of native iron in the form of meteorites dates back to remote antiquity. The weapons made from these were obtained, like flint implements, by chipping. And it is interesting to remember that recent investigations have shown that the iron of many meteorites is a sort of natural steel.

TIGHTEST OF CORNERS

TIMES WHEN TOURISTS HAD CAUSE TO TREMBLE.

Some Holiday-Makers Have Most Unlooked-for and Thrilling Adventures.

Imagine rushing down a steep, ice-clad road at a speed approaching that of an express train, and with a dead man seated at the steering-wheel of the sleigh! Can any more horrible predicament be dreamed of?

In January, 1908, a party of four tourists took a bob-sleigh up to the Swiss mountain village of Leyzin, intending to run down to Sepey, three miles below. Their steersman was a Mr. Derren, who was both capable and experienced. A mile they travelled in safety, and then, just as the sleigh had reached its topmost speed, and the white snow-dust was flying in fountains under the screaming steel runners, Mr. Derren's head fell forward. The pace had proved too much for a weak heart, and he was dead.

A LIGHTNING SLIDE.

The other passengers thought that he had fainted, but, as they were unable to reach the wheel, there was nothing for it but to trust to chance. Down they flew at ever-increasing speed, missing two other bob-sleighs by a miracle, through the street of Sepey like a flash of lightning, and then the end of their career came as they crashed down upon a frozen pond. All three were hurt, but happily no one was killed.

People who spend their holidays in mountainous countries are liable to find themselves in a tight place just when they least expect it. Gaping Ghyll, that vast cavern under Ingleborough Mountain, presents no special dangers to the man with a cool head and strong muscles. It was simply a sudden rainstorm which, a few weeks ago, imprisoned several members of the Yorkshire Ramblers Club in its black depths.

A small stream pours through the cavern, and this, swollen by the heavy rain, rose so fast that it blocked the only exit, so that the explorers were obliged to remain where they were for nearly twenty-four hours before the water subsided enough to allow them to crawl out.

Of all ghastly predicaments that a man could find himself in, nothing could be much more dreadful than the experience of Mr. W. M. Crook. In company with two ladies, he was walking across the Lower Theodule glacier, with the surface of which he was quite familiar, when all of a sudden the snow gave way beneath him, and he found himself dropping downwards through space.

"TWIXT LIFE AND DEATH.

He was conscious of flying down between two dark walls of ice, while broken fragments of snow and ice rushed past him. Then he was brought up with a crash, and found himself on a ledge. Below him the black rift sank to unknown depths; far above a streak of blue showed the sky.

He had fallen sixty-five feet! His head was bleeding badly, but he did not lose his presence of

On attempting to open the valve and let out the gas, the valve-rope broke, and when night came the party was still in the air. Fortunately, cooler air contracted the gas, and the balloon slowly sank. They paid out the guide-rope, and at last the grapnel caught in a hedge. Some peasants came to the rescue, and with difficulty the balloon was hauled down.

UPS AND DOWNS.

Nine of the party got out, but one of M. Vernanchet's sons, thinking he would let out the gas, climbed to the valve. There came a little gust of wind, the ropes slipped through the hands of the holders, and up shot the balloon into the darkness, with the young fellow clutching desperately to the broken valve-rope.

Naturally, his friends gave him up for lost. But the boy had plenty of pluck and resource. He managed to get out a knife, and cut the envelope, and eventually came to ground some ten miles away, half frozen, but unhurt.—London Answers.

A CITY OF MYSTERIES.

Terrible Deeds Committed in Glasgow, Scotland.

Glasgow has been the scene of probably more really world-famous murder mysteries than any other city of its size.

Here live Madeline Smith, the beautiful actress, whose arrest on the charge of poisoning her lover, one Emile L'Anglier, created so tremendous a sensation. The trial lasted ten days, and ended in the eminently unsatisfactory verdict—peculiar to Scottish law—of "Not Proven."

The luxurious home of Madeline's aristocratic parents was situated in Blythwood Square; and here, too, resided "Pritchard the Prisoner," a doctor who killed his wife and her mother by the administration of tartar emetic. He was one of the earliest of the "slow prisoners," and one of the cruellest and most callous.

Then there was the "Broomielaw Mystery," a murder of the now too-familiar "trunk tragedy" type, the body of a young and pretty girl being found in a box in the middle of the thoroughfare in question one foggy November night.

Glasgow's mystery of mysteries, however, was that known as the "Saltmarket Affair." An aged dealer in antiquities, living alone with an old housekeeper, was found one morning dead in bed, his throat having been cut from ear to ear, and all around signs of a fearful struggle. Upstairs the old retain-er was also lying dead, shot through the heart. The street door was bolted on the inside, and the ground-floor shutters were also securely fastened from within. No money nor other property had, so far as could be ascertained, been taken.

The terrible deed, it turned out, had been committed by the deceased's own brother, a worthless scamp, by whom the old gentleman had long been blackmailed.

He had lowered himself to the level of his unhappy relative's bedroom by a rope from above, and, having committed the double murder, had quietly made off, leaving everything intact, and intending later on to claim his victim's estate as the legal next-of-kin.

This he indeed did, and the resultant inquiries led first to his arrest and ultimately to his death at the hands of the public execu-

THE OLDEST LOVE LETTER.

Addressed Over 4,000 Years Ago to the Writer's "Little Ewe."

A love letter 4,000 years old has lately been discovered in Chaldea. The lady to whom it was addressed lived in Sippara, the Biblical Sefharvani. Her beloved was a resident of Babylon.

In chronicling this interesting discovery the Corriere della Sera of Rome calls attention to the fact that in contrast to the position which women held at the present day in that Irient they possessed in antiquity a great degree of freedom.

In many respects the Oriental woman of antiquity was graced with as much privilege as is the modern European woman. Particularly in Chaldea she could participate in trade, manipulate her own property, be a witness before the court and be the guardian of her own children.

Of the position of women in Egypt we know less, but doubtless it was much higher than that of the present Mohammedan women. In one respect, however, it seems that custom has changed very slightly, for marriage was essentially an affair of trade between the parents of the bridegroom and those of the bride.

This is ascertained from the legal code of Hammurabi, King of Babylon, B. C. 2200. The future husband paid the price of the bride and her father provided for her dower and trousseau. Under these circumstances there was no such courtship as precedes marriage in accordance with Occidental ideas.

Still one may believe that many a love letter on papyrus or clay passed secretly between the hands of the bridal pair during the interval of their engagement. The newly discovered letter is written in clay and probably dates from 2200 B. C. It reads:

To the lady, Kasbuya (little ewe), says Gimil Marduk (the favorite of Morodach) this: May the Sun of God of Marduk afford you eternal life. I write wishing that I may know how your health is. Oh, send me a message about it. I live in Babylon and have not seen you, and for this reason I am very anxious. Send me a message that will tell me when you will come to me, so that I may be happy. Come in Marchesvan. May you live long for my sake.

Doubtless the summons to come in Marchesvan is based on the writer's wish that she may have an opportunity to share with him the festivals of that month and the gayety that comes with them. Though Egypt has so far failed to yield a single love letter, it can claim to have the most beautiful love-songs, says the Literary Digest. Of all the nations of antiquity, it may most fittingly be called "the land of eternity." There death was only an incident of life, and woman was man's "beloved sister" as well in the "hidden land" as on earth.

This beautiful side of the Egyptian character is shown most clearly in the celebrated Song of the Harpist, of the year 2500 B. C., that probably was sung at the Egyptian festivals: "Graciously grant us days free from sorrow, Holy Father. Come nearer! Be-bold, ointments and perfumes bring we unto you; blossoms and lilies do we bring to adorn the neck of your sister—of her who lives in your

DISCIPLINING OF PRINCES

HOW THE LITTLE ROYALTIES ARE PUNISHED.

Certain Customs and Formalities Which Royal Children Must Observe.

Little princes and princesses, like other children, sometimes violate the discipline of the nursery or school-room, and when they do so they by no means escape punishments, which are frequently more severe than those meted out to children of less highly-placed people.

For example, lessons in the Royal school-room at Marlborough House begin at 6.30 a.m. in the summer, and 7 a.m. in the winter. The prince who is late for school finds his breakfast curtailed to tea without milk or sugar, and bread without butter.

A story is told how, on one occasion, little Prince George declined to partake of any of this frugal fare, whereupon he suffered the pangs of hunger until the midday meal at noon, when, much to his disgust, he was offered the same food again; but this time he promptly accepted it.

The prince who neglects to prepare his lessons properly, maltreats his school books, or refuses to comply with the rule that all the Royal children when five years old are required to obey—namely, to speak in French or German during meals—is punished in different ways.

ONE PUNISHMENT

is detention in the school-room for an hour—or, perhaps, two—after lessons are over, when he is set some special task to do. A greater punishment is to be left at home when a visit to see a cricket-match, or some similar expedition, has been arranged.

No caning can be inflicted on the children of the Royal Family without the consent of the Prince of Wales; but his Royal Highness, though he is averse from inflicting this form of punishment as a general rule, does not believe in sparing the rod and spoiling the prince policy. For any repeated disobedience a child of the Royal house would be caned.

A report of the progress of the Royal pupils in their studies, and on their general behaviour, is submitted to the Prince and Princess of Wales every month by their tutor, and a copy of the report is sent to the King. Any unfavorable remark in the report is sure to be followed by a lecture to from his Majesty, and might possibly entail some special punishment.

On one occasion some remarks in the monthly report led to Prince George being detained at Marlborough House at Easter, while his brothers departed to the country to enjoy a fortnight's holiday. The particular offence which occasioned this punishment on the little prince was his violation of the rule prevailing in the Royal household that the children must never leave Marlborough House without special permission and must, of course, always be accompanied by some member of the household when doing so. Prince George on two oc-between two dark walls of ice, broken fragments of snow and ice rushed past him. Then he was brought up with a crash, and found himself on a ledge. Below him the black rift sank to unknown depths; far above a streak of blue showed the sky.

He had fallen sixty-five feet! His head was bleeding badly, but he did not lose his presence of mind. He plastered the wound up with snow, and, with his ice-axe—which had been slung round him—began cutting footholds. But the cold of a glacier rift is appalling. The axe slipped from his numbed hands, and rattled down into the bottomless blackness below.

Soon the deadly cold began to chill him to the bone. He could not move, for he was forced to cling for dear life. He had given up hope, when at last help, brought by one of his plucky companions, reached him, and he was hauled up to safety.

Next to mountains and caves, it is the seaside holiday-maker who meets with the most unlooked-for adventures. One fine evening in September, 1907, some fifty pleasure-boats were sailing or rowing on the Firth of Clyde, off Dunoon, when a sudden gale swept down the river, and within five minutes a heavy sea was running.

Some boats won to shore, but a number were swept out to sea. One boat was found next morning at Largs, still floating. In it was the body of a girl, dead from cold and exposure. In all, three were drowned, and many had bitter experiences.

American house-boats are much larger than ours. On the Hudson, at New York, there are a number which might almost be called boat-houses. On July 29th, 1906, two hundred of New York's smart set were in one of these—a great, two-storied structure—watching some swimming races, when a furious thunderstorm broke.

IN THE NICK OF TIME.

A tremendous squall struck the house-boat, there was a sudden rending of overstrained hawsers, and the whole thing was adrift, and swirling down the river on a rapid ebb tide.

Some, who could swim, sprang into the water and gained the shore; the rest went driving down towards the harbor, screaming in panic. The overloaded structure rocked horribly, and disaster seemed certain. It was the proprietor of a bathing pavilion who came to the rescue. Springing into a petrol-launch, he went in pursuit, overtook the house, made it fast to the launch, and triumphantly towed it ashore.

At Paris, M. Vernanchet and a party of nine holiday-makers had a most exciting adventure a year or two ago. They had hired a balloon and, after a delightful six hours' trip in mid-air, were warned by the increasing darkness that it was time to descend.

SENSE OF PROPRIETY.

"So you stole this man's axe?" said the judge.

"Yessah. I reckon dar ain't no use tryin' ter spude de facts."

"What did you do that for? He said he would have been perfectly willing to lend you the axe."

"Yes; but you see, judge, dat man's on'y jes' moved in der neighborhood. I doesn't know him well enough ter go 'roun' ter his house borryin'."

level of his unhappy relative's bedroom by a rope from above, and, having committed the double murder, had quietly made off, leaving everything intact, and intending later on to claim his victim's estate as the legal next-of-kin.

This he indeed did, and the reluctant inquiries led first to his arrest and ultimately to his death at the hands of the public executioner.

A MADMAN'S PROJECT.

Phrenologist Fleeces German Dupes by the Thousand.

Herr Heinrich Bettermann, a man of unsound mind, has succeeded in duping many thousands of educated men and women by telling their fortunes, and thereby amassing a great fortune for himself and for his partner, Herr Schmidt, of Magdeburg, Germany.

Bettermann established himself at the Village of Broich, near Muelheim, in West Germany, a little more than two years ago as a phrenologist, and subsequently as an astrologer, and by means of extensive advertising offered to foretell future events. Clients of every class and of all ages came from the first day in scores, and soon swelled into hundreds and thousands. His business developed to such an extent that he was obliged to engage a man named Schmidt as business manager. With Schmidt's assistance he established seventy branches in different parts of the Continent, and he dealt with the clients of all these establishments by post. According to the evidence given it appears that Bettermann accumulated a fortune of more than $500,000 within two years. In many cases disastrous results ensued from Bettermann's prophecies.

In consequence of testimony at the trial that Bettermann was of unsound mind, the Court acquitted Bettermann, but his accomplice, Schmidt, was sentenced to two months' imprisonment.

ONE-ARMED PIANIST.

Count Zichy, With Great Handicap, Became Fine Musician.

Count Geza Zichy, president of the National Conservatory of Music at Budapest, celebrated his 60th birthday on July 23. Referring to the event, a Vienna paper speaks of him as a unique figure in the musical world. "If we are justified in saying that Raphael would have been a great painter, even if he had no arms," says the writer, "we can certainly say that Zichy was a great pianist, although he had but one arm. He was fourteen years old when he lost his right arm on a hunting tour, but notwithstanding this handicap he continued the study of music, and became so proficient as a performer that he played with great skill the works of Chopin and other composers. In 1896 he made his first appearance before the public as a pianist, and he has since that time played at hundreds of concerts, always for the benefit of some charitable institution. He composed several operas, and in 1891 became the director of the Hungarian opera at Budapest."

character is shown most clearly in the celebrated Song of the Harpist, of the year 2500 B. Behold, ointments and perfumes bring we unto you; blossoms and lilies do we bring to adorn the neck of your sister—of her who lives in your heart, of her who sits there beside you. Come near finally. Music and song are greeting you. And the days of sadness—these have sunk away and radiant joy is smiling and will smile till the day on which you will pass into the land that loves eternal silence."

DIFFICULTIES OF JAPANESE.

Even the Natives Find the Language Very Difficult.

People who are thinking of taking up the study of Japanese should pause before they attempt the task and ask themselves whether they have a peculiarly strong linguistic aptitude. Even the Japanese find the language very difficult. Anglo-Saxons who growl about the difficulties of our spelling and favor the simplified system would never live if they had to undergo what the subject of the Mikado suffers in the matter of language.

It takes a Japanese child seven years to learn the essential parts of the alphabet. There are signs, which serve the same purpose as initial letters in English dictionaries. Then after you have tracked down in one of these 214 signs some part of the character for which you are about to take a search you still have a veritable Parkes Africa ahead of you. The pompous first personal pronoun is avoided whenever it is possible in speaking Japanese. If it must be used it is introduced casually, but generally the abstract noun "selfishness" serves in its stead.

For example, a Japanese would not say, "I don't drink wine," but "Wine don't drink"; or, if this is not clear enough, "Selfishness wine don't drink." Reference to your possessions must be deprecatory. Thus, if a man wishes to point out his own residence he says, "That miserable house," which, of course, could refer to no other than his own.

On the other hand, "That beautiful house" would easily identify the house as belonging to some one else. Moreover, anyone who wishes to learn Japanese must be prepared to learn two languages—the written and the spoken. The one differs so materially from the other that if a Japanese is reading a book or newspaper and wishes to do so aloud it becomes necessary for him to translate the written words into the colloquial. To be able to read any of the higher class Japanese newspapers it is necessary to master at least from 2,500 to 3,000 ideographs.

"Trying on his new trousers."—Life.

to enjoy a long and happy life. This particular offence which occasioned this punishment on the little prince was his violation of the rule prevailing in the Royal household that the children must never leave Marlborough House without special permission and must, of course, always be accompanied by some member of the household when doing so. Prince George on two occasions managed to break bounds, and to get into Pall Mall by himself, but his progress further afield was stopped by the sentry on duty.

There are certain customs and formalities which the Royal children are taught to observe carefully from their earliest years. For example, each little prince, after he is five years old, must be scrupulous to return the salute of soldiers or sailors, by whom he is always saluted when they pass him.

IF THEY KNOW WHO HE IS.

He must always, of course, be equally careful to return the salute of officers and members of the household. On one occasion Prince Eddie, when leaving Marlborough House, neglected to return the sentry's salute.

The little prince was promptly ordered back by his tutor, and made to acknowledge the salute in the proper manner.

The birthdays of the King and the Prince of Wales and Prince Eddie are observed as holidays among the Royal children. Sometimes the holiday is spent at Buckingham Palace, if their Majesties are in London, or some special expedition to a cricket or football match may be arranged. Any grave breach of discipline on the part of a young prince, however, entails forfeiture of this holiday.—London Answers.

LIVING IN GLASS HOUSE.

Don't Throw Stones at Children Who Copy Your Faults.

The little ones are natural born imitators and would rather copy any day than carry out abstract illustrations.

Can you expect your son to be honest when he hears you put off tradespeople on the ground that you haven't the money when you really have it, but don't want to pay the bill just then?

And can you expect that your daughter will not deceive you when she hears you tell the maid repeatedly that you are not at home and you are?

How about teaching self-control when you lose your own temper at the slightest provocation and mope over every little bad turn that happens to you?

And what about self-respect and neatness when you go about the house in a soiled wrapper and gossip over subjects which belong to the yellow papers?

Can a child form the right ideas of life when it sees you reading trash and wasting your time?

Can it learn to be sensible or high minded when all you think about are display and the latest fashions?

No, indeed! Hours of lecturing do not count against one minute of bad example.

Be the things yourself that you want your children to be. That is the only kind of teaching that will make any kind of impression on them.

Fewer people would have axes to grind if they had to furnish the motive power to revolve the grindstone.

MINERS WOUNDED BY POLICE

Seven Men Wounded by Company's Police in Glace Bay Strike Fracas.

A despatch from Glace Bay, N. S., says: Seven men were struck by bullets on Wednesday afternoon fired from revolvers in the hands of the coal company's police. None of them were seriously hurt, two of them being struck in the leg and another man having a portion of one of his ears shot off.

The row started over some men who were stealing coal from one of the little seams which have been opened up by strikers since the labor troubles. A little to the eastward of No. 2 mine is the seashore and along the cliffs facing the sea appear small seams of the coal. These are of little economic value and have never been worked. The land is included in the Dominion Coal Company's leases and the officials of the company have been forbidden the digging of coal from these seams.

Wednesday afternoon it was discovered that two boys were taking coal from the cliff and thereupon Norman McKenzie, accompanied by M. McAdam and three other policemen of the coal company, each armed with a revolver, proceeded to the cliff to arrest the amateur miners. While in the act of arresting them a crowd gathered and commenced jeering the police. They ordered the crowd to disperse, but the orders were not promptly obeyed. The police drew their revolvers and fired first in the air and then into the crowd. The wounded men were arrested and placed in jail on a charge of "unlawful assembly" and warrants have been issued for the arrest of the men who used their revolvers.

The police say the crowd threw stones before they used their pistols, but the men of the crowd say not a stone was thrown until the revolver shots were fired.

A remarkable series of thefts were admitted to have been committed by John George Ross in the Police Court on Wednesday. Ross was arraigned on five charges of theft from local hotels, and to all he pleaded guilty and elected to be tried by Colonel Denison. The charges were of stealing suit cases filled with clothes and other articles. The case was remanded for a week to allow the police time to make investigations. His description and finger prints have been sent to several cities in the United States where it is believed that he is wanted.

DOUBLE TRACK PRAIRIES.

C. P. R. President Says It Will Have to be Done.

A despatch from Montreal says: Sir Thomas Shaughnessy arrived back in Montreal on Saturday from his annual trip of inspection over the Western portion of the C. P. R. system. The trip extended over the whole of the principal lines of the C. P. R. between Montreal and Vancouver, and also over the "Soo" lines, and the recently acquired Chicago and Great Western Railway. What he had seen in the West had been extremely gratifying to him, he said. There were progress and development everywhere, and plenty of new people and new capital were coming in. All the good things that had been said about this year's harvest were true, Sir Thomas remarked. He believed this year's harvest would bring $120,000,000 of money into the country. "There has been some talk about the C. P. R. being double-tracked across the prairies. Is there anything in that?" he was asked. "Yes, I think that will have to be done eventually," he replied, "and double tracking from Winnipeg to Brandon will be the first step."

SEEN IN PARIS SHOPS.

Wide velvet ribbon will decorate many of the best hats.

Cords are to be one of the chief novelties of the new gowns.

Colored embroidery will be much used in the newest neckwear.

Ribbons have been coming gradually into fashion again as trimming.

The new coat collars are odd and attractive and cut on decidedly novel lines.

The most popular tunic is one that is draped rather low.

Linens and ginghams are the most comfortable wear for little girls in school.

The newest skirts have a deep hip-yoke effect that fits the figure closely.

Large collars and deep closings are among the most notable features of autumn coats.

The waist for afternoon wear can be made with Dutch round neck or with the high collar.

A hat of greenish blue moire has its crown encircled with a wreath of brown leather leaves.

One of the most popular waists for dressy wear this season is the model with the bib effect.

The star belt is made of dull gold covered with tiny silver sequins in the shape of stars.

Velvet belts, cut in the design of flowers, each blossom holding a gem, will be a pretty fashion.

The latest whim of the Parisian is carrying the evening gloves in the hand instead of wearing them.

The French tailors are making a great effort to give the back of the new coat a small contracted look.

For evening wear elaborate gold and silver belts, hand painted, jeweled or embroidered will be popular.

While the plain nets are popular, those with the dot and the vermicelli design are more in first style.

For evening wear there are huge turbans of white marabout, trimmed with white aigrettes and a rhinestone buckle.

Hatpins of mammoth dragon flies, huge beetles, and other terrible things are reproduced in iridescent glass.

Cloth of silver gives a most effective touch to a turban of black velvet designed for a middle aged woman.

Tulle is worn not only as a foundation material for many dresses, but as the trimming and decoration of many others.

The transparent effects are in full sway among the silks, gray over pattern blue, green or black over Sevres blue being lovely.

The semi-princess dresses have been in close competition with the princess models since their first introduction, but so far neither has gained the upper hand; both styles are perfectly suitable for dressy gowns.

HEALTH

TEMPERAMENT AND DISEASE

In a former article some facts were stated concerning the different temperaments or types of vital action into which mankind is divided. These are usually reckoned as five, although the classification is not very definitely fixed. Each of these types is distinguished by a predisposition to certain maladies and by a special mode of reaction to the poison of the infectious diseases. Those of the lymphatic or phlegmatic temperament are sluggish and disinclined to exercise, their muscles are soft and flabby, and there is a general absence of tone in the system. The diseases from which they suffer are usually those marked by debility, and they have often to be keyed up with tonics even when not really ill.

Those of the nervous type are of small frame, active in mind and body, light eaters and light sleepers. Their tendency is to diseases of the nervous system. They tire easily after a spurt of work or play, but above all things should resist the temptation to resort to "pick-me-ups," which have a fatally good effect for the time being. These people need sleep—but must not resort to drugs to get it—and restful vacations.

The jolly people of the sanguine temperament, with their florid complexions, their hearty appetites and good digestions, enjoy life as it comes. The diseases to which they are most liable are gout and premature hardening of the arteries, with its consequent heart and kidney troubles and apoplexy. The regimen best adapted to ward off these maladies is a restricted diet, especially as regards flesh food, avoidance of alcoholic beverages, and the drinking of plenty of pure water to wash away waste materials.

are most liable are gout and premature hardening of the arteries, with its consequent heart and kidney troubles and apoplexy. The regimen best adapted to ward off these maladies is a restricted diet, especially as regards flesh food, avoidance of alcoholic beverages, and the drinking of plenty of pure water to wash away waste materials.

Persons of the bilious temperament are prone to diseases of the liver, gall-stones, intestinal indigestion and constipation. They are large consumers of food, but derive little enjoyment from eating. They are often much benefited by a course of dieting and consumption of mineral waters, after the plan developed to a high degree by the German watering-place physicians.

The strumous type is less distinctly a temperament than an actual tendency to disease. There is little reparative power here; wounds heal sluggishly, the glands in different parts of the body often swell and sometimes break down, the appetite is small and digestion poor. Persons of this type do not bear confinement well, and are prone to become consumptive unless they live much in the open air.—Youth's Companion.

STRANGLED IN A TOWEL.

Three-year-old Boy Found Dead by His Mother.

A despatch from Galt says: The little three-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. David Hastings, North Water street, strangled himself on Thursday morning in the kitchen while his mother was working in the next room. He had been playing with the roller towel, and it is supposed becoming enmeshed in it, was unable to extricate himself. The little fellow made no outcry, and his mother had no intimation of the accident until she had occasion to visit the kitchen, when she was horrified to find her son entangled in the towel and suspended in it. Drs. Wardlaw and Charlton were at once summoned and every known method of resuscitation was tried, but without effect. Life was apparently extinct when the mother made her discovery.

A despatch from Toronto says: The total value of the production of minerals in the Province of Ontario for the first six months of 1909 was $10,649,923, as against $8,082,264 for a similar period last year.

Nickel increased 26 per cent in quantity and pig iron 44 per cent. Iron ore remained about the same and there was a slight decrease in copper.

The mineral production is divided as follows:

JUMPED INTO RIVER.
Joseph Gay of Ottawa Takes His Own Life.
A despatch from Ottawa says: Joseph Gay of Ottawa, 23 years of age, a clerk in the Marine Department, and at one time Secretary to Hon. Mr. Brodeur, committed suicide on Thursday morning by jumping off the interprovincial bridge into the Ottawa River. Several men saw him run out half way across the bridge and leap from the railing into the river, forty feet below. A boat was hastily procured and put off to the rescue, but the swift-flowing river bore the body away before the rescuers could reach it. Mr. Gay returned to his office in the Marine Department only a few days ago after a long holiday in the country north of Ottawa, where he went to recover from an illness brought on by overstudy. It is supposed that the suicide was the result of a recurrence of the malady from which he previously suffered.

GAMES OF CHANCE AT FAIRS.

Authorities Take Action to Suppress Gambling at Fairs.

A despatch from Toronto says: It having come to the knowledge of the Provincial Government that a large number of fakirs have been preparing to carry on illegal practices at fairs and exhibitions in different parts of the Province, Mr. J. Lockie Wilson, Superintendent of Agricultural Societies, has arranged to send a number of private detectives to the various fairs in Ontario, who will see to it that the law is strictly enforced. These detectives are being sent out by the department without the knowledge or request of any fair officials. In many instances these gamblers carry on their nefarious practises without the knowledge of the directors, having secured space on the grounds ostensibly for legitimate business. The penalty for the infringement of the provisions of the agricultural societies act is not less than $20, and not more than $100, and costs.

Pitiful Death of a Little Boy at Waverly, N. Y.

A despatch from Waverly, N. Y., says: A scratch from the paw of a rabid dog was responsible for the death on Thursday of George Murray, the four-year-old child of a local merchant. The boy was playing near his home recently with two older boys, when they were suddenly attacked by a strange dog. The other two were bitten and were sent to the Pasture Institute for treatment as soon as it became known that the dog was mad. The Murray child's injury was so superficial, however, that no alarm was felt. On Wednesday he developed unmistakable symptoms of rabies and died on Thursday in great agony.

BRITISH TARS IN NEW YORK

"Here Come the British!" Was the Cry of Everybody.

A despatch from New York says: One of the pleasant features of Thursday's military pageant was the hearty interest evidently felt by the crowd in the British sailors and marines, and the appreciative reception accorded them. From the first to the last, the crowd found merit aplenty in these sailors here to join in the Hudson-Fulton celebration, to whom the city has been paying special tribute for a week, and did not hesitate to show its appreciation. The crowd was quick to recognize tactical merit and unstinted in approval of it where found. They cheered the British jacks in their odd-looking straw hats, and the Royal Marine light infantry with the gold globe on their collars, which tells the story of battles and hard service in every part of the world. The well-set-up sailors from the British ships in their service uniform aroused great enthusiasm, the acclaim subsiding only to rise again as all the details of precision and perfect alignment of movement were grasped by the crowd.

"Here come the British," everybody yelled, and then they all stood up preparatory to giving King Edward's men just such a reception as the King's Australian subjects tendered the men of the Atlantic fleet in Melbourne a little over a year ago. It was the first time in the memory of the oldest of those present when a British column of fighting men had paraded through the streets of New York. The inflexible band headed the Britishers, and well did it sustain its reputation as one of the finest naval bands on the seven seas.

The Britishers got a great reception all along the line, and when the color-bearers with the Union Jack and the Admiral's pennant passed, the people stood up in honor of the colors, while the Americans and foreign officers who were in the stand stood at attention, their right hands at their caps in salute.

YOUNG FOLKS

EARS FOR EYES.

Aunt Ruth, Bertha and Alice were on the piazza, busy with needlework. Carl and Norton were lounging near.

"Oh, put up your work—do! I want a game of some sort," pleaded Norton.

"This mat never will be done! I don't hurry up," replied Alice. "Shut your eyes, Norton," said Aunt Ruth, "and tell us what you hear."

"Is it a game?" "I'll leave that for you to say, when we have all tried it," laughingly said his aunt.

"Well," began Norton, "as his eyes went together, 'I think I hear wheels down the road. Yes, they are coming nearer. Shall I open my eyes now?'"

"Wait a minute! Tell us what the wheels are on."

"Why, a wagon of some sort. I guess it's a grocery team—I don't hear it now."

"Where has it stopped?"

"Down the street somewhere—maybe at the Braces."

The others laughed.

"Oh, that's not fair! I'm going to open my eyes—why, I thought it was nearer than that! And it isn't a grocery wagon! It is Mrs. Parker's father, with his double carriage!"

"Let me try it!" cried Bertha.

But she mistook a furniture van for an ice-cart, and there was a call for Aunt Ruth to play the part of guesser.

She laid her embroidery in her lap, shut her eyes, and listened.

"Mr. Wilson's horse has just turned the corner of Hubbard Street," she presently announced.

"Why—ee! How could you tell?" gasped Norton.

Crime in Britain is Reported to be on the Increase.

A despatch from London says: The annual report of the Commissioners of Prisons, just issued, contains some interesting facts. There were 18,996 persons imprisoned for debt or civil process—a thousand more than last year; and the general figures also show an increase, the total number of prisoners being 205,681, against 196,232. The commissioners comment on the unexpectedly large number of convicts in local prisons. The average number in custody in local prisons for the year was 18,923, the highest number being 20,225 in the month of December last.

BEATEN AND ROBBED.

Montreal Man Claims to Have Lost $1,000 and Diamond.

A despatch from Montreal says: Beaten into insensibility and robbed of $1,000 in cash, and a diamond ring valued at $450, was the story told in the Arraignment Court on Thursday by Mr. Charles Cedarstrum, manager for Bloomfield Brothers, wholesale merchants, who appeared to press the charge against Joseph Leblanc, a cabman, who was arrested on Wednesday night on suspicion. His story was that after taking the cab he was driven into an unfrequented part of the city, and assaulted and robbed. The accused was remanded.

STARTED FROM BRAZIER.

Plumbers' Repair Kit Caused Fire at Parliament Buildings.

A despatch from Toronto says: The origin of the fire which recently destroyed the western wing of the Parliament buildings has been officially determined. "The Government has investigated the source of the fire," said Sir James Whitney, when interviewed on Wednesday, "and there is no doubt whatever that it was caused by the charcoal brazier, left among the rafters by repairing plumbers. The Government has had good reasons for coming to that conclusion."

DOMINION REVENUE.

Great Increase in Customs Receipts for September.

A despatch from Ottawa says: The customs revenue of the Dominion for the month just ending shows an increase of no less than thirty-five per cent. over September of last year. The total collections were $5,437,458, an increase of $1,409,531. For the six months of the fiscal year the customs revenue totals $28,781,068, an increase of $5,918,350, as compared with the first half of the last fiscal year.

Prairie and Bush Fires Doing Damage in Saskatchewan.

A despatch from Fort Saskatchewan, Alta., says: Prairie and bush fires are burning three miles south and east of the park. There is no damage to the park, and none is anticipated. Said to Have Brought a Ton of Gold Dust From Alaskan Mines.

Leroy N. McQuesten, "Father of the Yukon," and one of the early pioneers of the Alaska gold fields, whose name is known to every seeker after gold in the Klondike, is dead at his Berkeley home, at the age of 73, says the San Francisco Call. A man of adventure, he had been a frontiersman all his varied career except the last 12 years, which he had spent in this city with his wife and eight children.

Jack McQuesten, the name he was known by among his associates, was one of the first seekers after gold in Alaska. McQuesten married a Yukon Indian woman, but never deserted her, and she survives him.

From the days of his youth the well known miner has been in the van which has for its motto Greeley's words, "Go west." McQuesten was born in Portland, Me., and at 14 years went with his father to the wilds of Oregon. This was in 1850, and five years later he was fighting Indians in the "Oregon war," and had many a skirmish with the Walla Wallas, who were on the warpath with the general uprising of the northern tribes.

In March of 1858 he was among the prospectors who joined the rush to the Fraser River gold fields, but gold was scarce and he had but little luck. He liked the country, however, and there he made his home, trapping and trading with the Indians in the neighborhood of the Mackenzie River.

In 1878 he went prospecting down the Mackenzie, crossed the Rocky Mountains by the Pelly and worked over to the Porcupine River and to the outposts of the Alaska Commercial Company on the Yukon River. Here a year later he built Fort Reliance while in the employ of the company and used this as a trading post headquarters where he traded with the Indians for more than twelve years.

When gold was struck at Forty Mile Creek forty miles below the fort he established a post there and kept the position until 1894, when he built Circle City. At this time he discovered gold on the Stuart River and amassed a fortune, panning out the dirt estimated at upward of $2,000,000.

"Let me try it," cried Berta.

She laid her embroidery in her lap, shut her eyes, and listened.

"Why-ee! How could you tell?" gasped Norton.

"I know his step," she replied.

"I never thought anything about a horse's step," said Alice.

"If you will listen to various horses, you will find that their steps differ as much as people's. But here comes a doctor's carriage!" said Aunt Ruth, her eyes still shut. "I think it must be Doctor Post, going to see the Higby baby—yes, he has stopped there. Am I right?"

"Exactly!" responded Carl.

But how in the world do you do it?"

"I wasn't sure until he stopped; but as I heard only the horse's hoofs, I knew it must be a rubber-tired carriage, and I thought at once of Doctor Post. He often comes about this time."

"I wish I had such ears," said Berta.

"You can train your ears, and this good practice."

"Oh, let me try it!" begged Carl.

"I hear an auto down on Hubbard street! Now I'm going to guess. It must be Mr. Huntington's, because Mr. Barry never comes home at this hour."

"No!" "Wrong!" chuckled Norton and Berta.

"Oh, it's that friend of the Shipmans!" he went on, as the car drew near.

"No, it's—"

"Don't tell!" Carl put in. "What is stopping here?" His eyes flew open. "Uncle Stanley!" he shouted, jumping up and waving his arms.

"Who wants a ride?" called out the man in goggles.

"I—!" "I—!" was answered from the piazza, while Carl said:

"We'll play that game again, or I'll play it by myself, till I can tell Uncle Stanley's auto when I hear it." Youth's Companion.

THE NEPTUNE LAUNCHED
Great Britain's Eighth Dreadnought in the Water.

A despatch from Portsmouth, England, says: The Neptune, Great Britain's eighth battleship of the Dreadnought class, or her eleventh, including the three battleship cruisers, Inflexible, Indomitable, and Invincible, was successfully launched here on Thursday, and named by the Duchess of Albany in the presence of a great concourse. The bulkheads of this super-Dreadnought are so heavily armored that experts consider her practically unsinkable by a torpedo.

The Neptune was commenced at Portsmouth on January 9th of this year. She has a displacement of 20,250 tons, length 510 feet, and beam 83 feet. She is consequently ten feet longer and two feet wider than any of her predecessors. She exceeds the Dreadnought type by 2,270 and the Bellerophon by 1,650 tons. She has turbine engines of 34,000 indicated horsepower, giving a speed of 21 knots an hour.

The Neptune has been described as "the last word" in battleships. Her ten 12-inch guns will be of the new fifty-calibre pattern, which has a greater range and penetration than the 12-inch guns now in use, and in addition she will carry four-inch guns for repelling torpedo attacks. The Admiralty considers her the most powerfully armed vessel thus far built.

OTTAWA NEWS.

The subject of Provincial rights has been debated many times in the House of Commons, and it has invariably appeared that when a Conservative member introduced a bill which might be regarded as an infringement of those rights no objection was made from his friends in the House. On the other hand, when a bill was introduced which it was alleged infringed upon the rights of the province, and that bill was introduced by a Liberal member, a great outcry was raised by Conservative members.

How Conservatives Act.

It is historical that last session a bill introduced by a Conservative member, which bill had been opposed in committee by a representative of the Ontario Government, met with no objection from Conservatives in the House the only objection raised was from the Liberal side of the House, when Mr. J. Conmee, M.P., for Thunder Bay and Rainy River, contended that provincial rights were being infringed upon.

The Ground They Took.

When Mr. Conmee subsequently introduced his Michigan Power Company bill, the Conservatives raised a howl against it upon the ground that the Federal Government had no right to expropriate lands of the province, and that the bill was a direct interference with provincial rights.

Mr. Borden's View.

Speaking on this subject, Mr. Borden said:—

"The Prime Minister last evening expressed the opinion that this Parliament has power to expropriate land belonging to, and used, or about to be used, by a Provincial Government. I take absolute issue with him on that point. On principle, I think that this Parliament has no power whatever in that respect, and the exercise of such power would lead to most absurd conclusions."

As the Federal Government have been charged time and again with infringing upon the rights of provinces, it would be well to bear in mind that this very point was decided in British Columbia. The case will be found in British Columbia Reports, Vol. II, Supreme Court of British Columbia, 1904. A case against the Canadian Pacific Co. Chief Justice Hunter gave his decision in the following language:—

The Law Of It.

"It has never been doubted, so far as I am aware, that Parliament in the exercise of its railway jurisdiction may provide for the expropriation of such private interests in land as may be required for railway purposes. If the interest of one man may thus be taken, then why may not Parliament do the same in the case of lands, the beneficial ownership of which is in the hands of a province collectively, i.e., Crown lands?"

When this judgement was read to ada by expropriating them. They are the property of Canada, but the western provinces could expropriate them, and probably expropriate them without much compensation."

His Original Contention.

Mr. Borden contended in the House and throughout the country, at the last election, that the western provinces owned their own lands and that the Dominion Government was wrongfully withholding them. In his Halifax platform he varied this position and advocated "restoration of the lands upon fair terms." When expressing his views on the Conmee bill, Mr. Borden distinctly admitted that Canada owned the lands contained within the new provinces. This view was before him when he favored restitution of the lands upon fair terms.

Time Adjusts Things.

As history unfolds we hear some strange things. The Mail admits the authority of parliament to give powers of expropriation, having previously contended to the contrary. Mr. Borden admits the power of the Federal Government to expropriate lands of the province of the judicial committee of the Privy Council upholds the view which they have done. Mr. Borden states unequivocally that the lands within the new provinces belong to Canada.

Sir Wilfred Laurier Was Right.

How much better it would have been for all concerned if the Mail and Mr. Borden had years ago reached the conclusion now expressed? What days of useless delay and unhappy recriminations in the House and in the country would have been prevented had they both accepted the dictum of Sir Wilfrid Laurier in 1905.

The people of Canada can see now that the Provincial rights' cry of the Conservatives amounted to nothing. They will understand what a difference it makes whether the objection of the people is to Provincial or Federal legislation. When the Dominion authority alone was in issue, the Dominion was all wrong. Now that the Provincial authority has been questioned by the people, the province is held to be right and the people wrong, and the Attorney-General of Ontario, says he will not grant a fiat to decide the question in the courts. It depends upon whose ox is being gored.

Japanese Question Again.

The Mail commenting upon the Japanese question says: "That the treaty admitting the Japs was entered into in the interests of contractors on the Pacific slope is now made plain." It was made plain long ago. The draft agreement between the Canadian Pacific Company and the agent of the Japanese to admit Japanese into Canada via Honolulu was drawn in the office of Mr. Bowser, Conservative Provincial Attorney of British Columbia, and when that fact was made known in Ontario, Mr. Bowser quietly disappeared from the political arena. The Mail occasionally stumbles on a truth. This is on a par with the Halifax and Moncton land deals quoted by that paper, in both instances, the beneficiary was a Conservative, and the valuator in the one case a Conservative candidate and in the other a prominent Conservative politician.

Mendacious Statement.

The Toronto Mail maintains its record for dirty, unreliable insinuations reflecting upon men of integrity, without a faction of warrant in past history, or a scintilla of evidence at present to support it. Referring to two vacancies in the Senate the Mail says:

Inexcusable Insults.

temptation or has even been mentioned, let the Mail have the courage to say so.

Where is the Evidence?

If the Mail has the slightest evidence to justify the statement spread broadcast over the land, the matter is "not yet certain," let the Mail give it. This method of underhanded fighting by innuendo is dispicable. The Mail does not possess a shred of evidence to justify such an insult to public men and against an honorable government. The Mail makes many mendacious statements, but this one is an insult to Canadian public men.

Public opinion should compel the Mail to publish any evidence in its possession which justified the statement that seats in the Senate were to be paid for in cash. The gentleman from Battleford, who has already been appointed to one of these vacant seats, should invite the Mail to make good its vile suggestion or tender an ample apology.

Canada is Maligned.

Canada is constantly held up to the derision of other countries as the home of grafting and iniquitous deals, simply on the basis of such articles as the one in the Mail referred to here. There is a grave and lamentable lack of patriotism on the part of a newspaper which purports to represent a great party, when it stoops to suggestion and innuendo for the simple object of injuring a political party to which it is opposed.

The Chestnut Horse.

There is an ancient tale of a band of Arabes being pursued by their enemies which sums up their theory about a horse's color. Among the fleeing band was a man with unusually keen eyesight, and from time to time he would describe to his leader the horses ridden by the enemy.

"What manner of horses do they ride?"

"Black horses."

"Then there is no need of haste."

At the noon halt the leader again asked, "What manner of horses do they ride now?"

"Bay horses."

"Then we must ride harder."

A few hours later the leader asked, "Are they horsed again?"

"They ride chestnuts."

"Then we ride for our lives."

Two Hamlets.

Sir Beerholm Tree and Wilson Barrett gave London their production of "Hamlet" almost contemporaneously. A well known wit who was asked his opinion of the dual Hamlets nonchalantly made answer: "Tree's Hamlet is funny without being vulgar, but Barrett's is vulgar without being funny."

Her Doings.

"His wife made a fool of him."

"What reason have you for saying that?"

"I have his own word for it."

"Get out!"

"I have. He says that all he is owes to his wife."

exercise of its railway jurisdiction may provide for the expropriation of such private interests in land as may be required for railway purposes. If the interest of one man may thus be taken, then why may not Parliament do the same in the case of lands, the beneficial ownership of which is in the hands of a province collectively, i.e., Crown lands?"

When this judgement was read to Mr. Borden in the House, he admitted its weight, but said that with all deference to the Court he would like to see the judgement reviewed by the Judicial committee of the Privy Council.

Privy Council Confirms It.

Strange to relate this very case had been reviewed by the Privy Council and the judgement of the British Columbian court has been sustained.

This proves that the contention in the House, that provincial rights have been invaded, cannot be sustained, that Mr. Borden's view of the powers of the Federal Government require revision, and that the alleged attack upon provincial rights has no foundation in fact.

In the case of the Michigan Power Company, there was power to expropriate only in one river and at a particular point in that river, yet the House was regaled with inflammatory speeches last session day after day by Tories, claiming provincial rights were being advanced.

Strange Idea Advanced.

It was put forward that the House of Commons had no right to grant power of expropriation of provincial lands. The settled law upon that point is that Parliament has that right, and at this late day the Toronto Mail and Empire, forgetting the opinions expressed when Mr. Connée's bill was under consideration says:

What the Mail Says.

"If the proper Parliamentary authority declares that a railway may be built by a private company, that company has the power to expropriate the right-of-way. Similarly, if the Legislature orders a power line to be built, no one can obstruct the work, or claim that it shall not be proceeded with because the line crosses any particular property. This prohibition is not meant to be hostile to the projector, it is rather defensive of the rights and interests of the people as a whole."

Suits Purpose of Moment.

This opinion is expressed by the Mail to support the refusal of Hon. Mr. Foy, Provincial Attorney-General, to grant a fiat to a party seeking to stop the work of the Hydro-Electric Company. The contention of the Mail is that when a Legislature passes an act that settles the question of right to work under the authority of the act.

Mail's Inconsistency.

When Mr. Connée's bill was before the House the Mail raised the objection that notwithstanding the act, the work must not go on, that the Federal parliament could not give the power asked for, and that provincial rights, that is the rights of the people, of the province, had not been consulted. When Mr. Foy says in effect that the people of Ontario have no rights that the Legislature cannot invade, and refuses his fiat to bring the question before the courts, the Mail flies to his defence, and lays it down that after the Legislature has acted, there is nothing more to be said or done but submit.

Mr. Borden's Admission.

Mr. Borden made a significant admission when discussing this question of expropriation powers. In Hansard, 1909, vol. iv. p. 6001, he is quoted as saying:

"If my right honorable friend's view were correct, the western provinces could get their lands back from Can-cord for dirty, unreliable, insinuations reflecting upon men of integrity, without a faction of warrant in past history, or a scintilla of evidence at present to support it. Referring to two vacancies in the Senate the Mail says:

Inexcusable Insults.

"The vacancies in the Senate resulting from the demise of Senator Perley and Senator Ferguson, two Conservatives, are to be filled by the appointment of two Liberal politicians to the Upper House. Whether or not these gentlemen will have to pay cash for their appointments is not certain.

Ignorance of Mail.

The Mail is proverbially ignorant upon public affairs. The gentleman who succeeds Senator Perley was appointed at least six weeks ago. The Mail has not the courage to say that this gentleman paid for his seat in the Senate, but hides behind the words "Whether or not these gentlemen, will have to pay cash for their appointment is not certain." That means that the subject is under discussion and not yet decided.

Politics, Not Patriotism.

This is the manner in which an alleged reputable newspaper of influence refers to Canadian public men. If the Mail knows that the payment of cash for a seat in the Senate is under con-

CURE THAT OBSTINATE SORE.

Where Ordinary Salves fail Zam-Buk Succeeds.

Chronic sores, which cause trouble by "breaking open," may be cured by Zam-Buk, as well as recent injuries and diseases. If you suffer from some old sore—hidden, perhaps, but none the less painful for that—don't daily, apply Nature's healing essences as provided in Zam-Buk. Mrs. J. E. Ashton, of 111, Vickers Street, Port William, tells how valuable Zam-Buk is as a family balm. She says:—"We first used Zam-Buk for cuts and bruises, etc., and found it so satisfactory that my husband started using it for a chronic sore. For a long time he had been bothered with an old sore on his leg, and had used various preparations, yet nothing had permanently cured it.

He began applying Zam-Buk balm, and was very soon agreeably surprised to notice a great improvement.

"It was only a matter of a short time before Zam-Buk had thoroughly cleansed the sore of all foul matter and healing commenced. It is now some months since the sore was completely closed, and there is no likelihood of it breaking out again.

"Since then my baby, eighteen months old, has been cured of eczema on the scalp by Zam-Buk. This eczema came in red pimples, and if rubbed or scratched, formed into sores. The child was very fretful from the irritation of the scalp, but whenever Zam-Buk was applied it seemed to bring the greatest relief. Frequent applications were effective in clearing all traces of the disease from the baby's scalp in a short space of time. I feel it my duty to give the credit where due, and I cheerfully recommend Zam-Buk to all sufferers from chronic sores, bad leg, or eczema."

Zam-Buk is Nature's own healing balm, being composed of pure herbal essences. It is a sure cure for eczema, ringworm, ulcers, cuts, bruises, burns, poisoned sores, chronic wounds, bad leg, piles, festering sores, chapped hands, cold-sores, frost-bite and all skin injuries and diseases. Druggists and stores everywhere sell at 50c. a box, or post free for price from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, 3 boxes $1.25. You are warned against harmful imitations represented to be "just as good."

is a grave and lamentable lack of patriotism on the part of a newspaper, which purports to represent a great party, when it stoops to suggestion and innuendo for the simple object of injuring a political party to which it is opposed.

Best Men Appointed.

The Liberal Government appoints to the Senate the best men the country affords, and no other consideration enters into the transaction than fitness for the position. No man has ever purchased a seat in the Senate since the Liberal Government came into power. What was done previous to 1896 the Mail may know something about, but to imagine that were such things done in Conservative days that it is proper to assume they are done now, is both unjust and untrue.

Echo From Tory Days.

The St. James Gazette, speaking of the Conservative manner of doing things, said: "The existence of an organized system of corruption among public officials in Canada has been conclusively proved and, like everything else on the America continent, the bribery has been colossal." The Mail may have had in mind some of the doings of early days with which it is familiar and applied the same standard of measurement to Liberals as it would to members of its own party. However, the position is that the Mail has made a most unworthy suggestion reflecting on Canadian public men, and it should either go further and produce some evidence of what it charges, or make tardy reparation by an apology in its columns to the gentleman, who has been appointed to succeed Senator Perley, and incidentally to the other gentleman who may shortly be appointed from Prince Edward Island to succeed the late Senator Ferguson.

People Are Just.

There are many reasons why the Conservatives have forfeited the confidence of the people, one of them is the making of the charges without proof or reason. The people of both political parties deprecate this system of stabbing in the dark.

Saved by His Leg.

A sailor with a cork leg was once shipwrecked on a cannibal island. He saw preparations being made for the feast, of which he was to be the piece de resistance, and with commendable presence of mind he asked the chief ("chef") if he did not think it would be as well if he tasted a sample first. The chief thought it an excellent suggestion, and so the man held up his cork leg while a sample was cut from it. The chief decided the man was too old, tough and tasteless, and so his life was spared.

Egypt Made First Pens.

Pens were first made in Egypt and were made of a kind of reed. The ancients did not seem to know that good pens could be made from goose quills. One Isidore, who died in 636, mentions both reeds and feathers as suitable for pens. Swan quills as being even better than goose quills were referred to in 1520. Steel pens were invented in the first part of the nineteenth century. People were slow to use them, because the metal was not sufficiently elastic. Perry cut slits in steel pens in 1830, and that settled goose quills.

Prompt.

An insurance agent was boasting that his company recently paid a life policy to the widow the day after the funeral of her husband and insisted that no company was ever so prompt in payment. "That's nothing," replied the agent of another company. "One of our patrons recently fell from the top of a four story building, and a check for the full amount of the policy was handed to him as he passed the second story window."

MINUTE WHALES.

A Million and a Half Could Rest on the Head of a Pin.

The completest and most perfect of whales is a whale so small that 1,500,000 such whales could find room in a space not larger than an ordinary pin's head. But in that vanishing speck of matter there is already determined just how all the innumerable cells of the future whale's body are to grow, how many of them are to be and where the bone cells, the muscle cells, the nerve cells and all its other bodily cells are to find their proper places in his body to the end of that whale's life.

But much more than that. In that one primordial cell, scarcely imaginable for its minuteness, are stored the physical memories, so to speak, of that whale's ancestors back to the first whale. Therefore as he grows he will show that whales used to walk, for legs complete to the last leg bone will be found in the adult whale in the proper place for legs, but now tucked under his skin because they are no longer usable, much as an English nobleman hangs in his hall his ancestors' coats of mail as mementos of days now gone by since the coming of rifle bullets.

Moreover, such a minute whale is nothing but a whale, because he cannot possibly grow into a fish any more than he can grow into a bird, for whales are mammals and therefore separated by an impassable biological gulf from all fishes. Lastly, in that primal cell not only does there reside the whole ancestral heritage of former whales, but there is ample provision

GREAT MEN'S SMOKES

WHAT SOME OF THE MONARCHS FANCY IN TOBACCO.

Abdul Hamid Under the Stress of Exile Has Been Known to Smoke Twenty Cigarettes an Hour—Kaiser Bill Prefers a Cheap Little Pipe When He Is at Home—Alfonso Prefers Cigarettes.

During the last few days the Sultan of Turkey was shut up in the Yildiz Kiosk he is said to have smoked over thirty cigarettes every hour to "cool his nerves," says Tit-Bits. For years Abdul Hamid has smoked dozens of strong cigarettes every day, and it can be said without fear of contradiction that he has been the most ardent devotee of the fragrant weed that was ever seated upon a throne.

King Edward likes cigars, cigarettes and a pipe. He, however, has no liking for American-made cigarettes, his favorites being mild Turkish ones. In his young days His Majesty smoked cigarettes and nothing else, but now he is more fond of a good cigar than "tobacco wrapped in paper." His every-day cigar is said to be specially made for him in Cuba, of the finest tobacco.

Once when the King was miles out on the Yankee prairie, during his American and Canadian travels, he produced a cigar, and his companions followed his example. "A match, please," said His Royal Highness. A match. There was only one match between the whole party. The position was tragic, for the wind was tearing over the prairie. In order to decide who should attempt to keep the solitary match alight in the wind lots were drawn with blades of grass. The dire responsibility fell upon the King. He lay on the ground and his companions gathered around him with outstretched coats as shelter. The match was lighted, so were the cigars. Never before or since has the King felt so nervous as when he struck that match in the vast American prairie miles away from any town or village.

The German Emperor smokes cigars and cigarettes out of doors, but when in the privacy of his study he puffs at a small wooden pipe of the type favored by the average smoker and costing about half a crown. The Kaiser consumes various kinds of tobacco, sometimes a mixture, and his cigars, which come from Cuba, cost about two shillings each.

The King of Spain keeps strictly to the cigarette. This is rolled in paper, ungunned, and requires very careful smoking to keep it whole. Alfonso's cigarette is about as peculiar as the cigar which the Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria used to smoke. The latter was fitted with a straw tube, and had to be held in a candle flame for a minute or two before it could be made to draw.

The Czar of Russia and the Prince of Wales favor the pipe when in private, but their smoking implements are of little value. A small pipe of the "bull-dog" type is affected by both of them, and the tobacco then consumed is of the common, inexpensive kind.

Bismarck was an ardent devotee of the weed, and it was his boast that he consumed more than a hundred thousand cigars in fifty years. Thomas Alva Edison probably holds the record for the number of cigars smoked daily by one man, for he has confessed that, while ten cigars are his normal allowance, he consumes double that number when deeply absorbed in work. Edwin Booth, the tragedian, often smoked 25 cigars a day, and his dresser used to stand in the wings with a lighted cigar when he made his exit. Dr. Norman Macleod, a famous Scottish preacher, used to keep a box of cigars in his vestry, and after service would regale himself with a "puff," much to the a nail in very hard wood one man will do it successfully, while another succeeds only in doubling the nail up before the point has fairly entered the wood? The difference lies in the fact that the expert strikes the nail fairly and not too hard, "coaxing" it in, while the other strikes too hard and with indirection. It may be properly mentioned right here that in driving a nail into very hard wood it is usually profitable to dip the end in oil or grease. This will not sensibly interfere with the holding qualities of the nail, while it will be found to very materially facilitate its driving.

A POWERFUL PRAYER.

It Brought the Judge's Kind of Light to the Farmer.

"The late Judge Underhill," said F. D. Browne of the engineering department of the Southern Pacific, "was perhaps one of the greatest characters that ever entered the service of a railroad. It was his facile disposition that led to his being appointed right of way agent by the Southern Pacific.

"Underhill was all things to all men. The ribald called him a reckless blade, the learned called him one of the elect, and the good character declared that the pulpit would have had one of its brightest ornaments if he had only heard the call.

"He was the most successful right of way getter that the company ever had.

"Underhill was sent up against a tough proposition. There was a farmer whose land lay right in the path of the road, and he was coy about selling. Underhill was sent to see him. They were out driving when the farmer turned to Underhill and said:

"I want to do the right thing, Judge. I have prayed all night for guidance in this matter, and I have not been given light."

"We will pray for light right now," said Underhill, and, getting on his knees, he made a fervent prayer for the farmer to sell his land to the Southern Pacific.

"Awestruck, the farmer listened on his knees to the powerful invocation of the judge, and when Underhill resumed his seat in the buggy he said:

"I have been given light, Judge. I'll sell the land at the figure you name."

They Used Charles Lamb.

Franking privileges in England were greatly abused in days gone by. The Government employee's friends shared in his opportunities. In a letter written by Wordsworth in 1815 the poet said: "By means of a friend in London I can have my letters free. His name is Lamb, and if you will add an 'e' to his name he will not open the letters. Direct as below nothing further. Mr. Lamb, India House, London. Cambridge, too, saw that a postage saved was a postage gained and made use of the Mr. Lamb of the India House—Charles Lamb.

Trifles.

A friend once called upon Michelangelo, who was finishing a statue. Some time after he called again and, looking at the figure, said, "You have been idle since I last saw you."

"By no means," replied the sculptor. "I have retouched this part, polished that; I have softened this feature and given more expression to this lip."

"Well, well," said the friend, "but these are mere trifles."

"It may be so," answered Michelangelo, "but recollect that trifles make perfection, and perfection is no trifles."

Tennyson's love for the pipe was proverbial. It was the great poet's boon companion, and an Irish clay was his favorite. Baskets of clay pipes ready for use were stacked around the walls of his study, and as many as 200 were to be found lying loose on the floor. Bird's eye was Tennyson's favorite tobacco.

Set Him to Work.

The smart young man, his school honors thick upon him, and his intention to teach the world in general and his father in particular the manner in which up to date commerce should be conducted—stood earnestly holding forth in his father's office.

"You may rely upon me, sir," he was saying, with perverted emphasis. "I will devote my whole life to the interests of the business. It shall be my aim and ambition to keep the family name free from stain."

"Good!" said the old man gruffly. "That's the spirit. Tell the office boy to give you the whiffing and ammonia; then go and polish up the brass name plate on the door."—London Mail.

Habit, Not Telepathy.

They were talking of telepathy. She was a believer, he a nonbeliever. "A great psychic wonder of a man, I forget his name," she said, "was in such telepathic communion with his wife that he could sit in one room with a friend, talking with him, then call her in from another room, and she could tell him everything he had said to his friend."

"That's nothing," he scorned. "They had lived together so long she knew everything he had to say and just the rotation in which he was accustomed to say it."

A Blue-Boned Skeleton.

"Now that the genuine high society folks have opened their doors to us," said Mr. Windfall smilingly, "I suppose we ought to have a family skeleton, eh, Amelia?"

"Of course, and I had forgotten about it entirely!" gurgled Mrs. Windfall. Get the best the market affords, my dear—one whose family tree can be traced back at least 500 years."

DRIVING A NAIL.

More to It Than Simply Hammering, I Into the Wood.

One who thinks that the driving of a nail consists simply in getting the whole length of it out of sight has little conception of the real nature of the operation, says the Scientific American. A nail driven by an expert will often hold several times as much as one ill driven, while, too, it is often made to draw the parts into place. If you have ever watched a mechanic driving nails you have doubtless noted that he rarely drives one at right angles with the face of the work. There is a reason for this. Suppose that he is nailing the "sheeting" on the frame of a building and desires to draw the board down tightly against the one below it. He points the nail downward, and a few well considered blows at the last produce the desired effect. If the board is bent edgewise, so that much force is required, probably he will start the nail in the upper edge, pointing very sharply downward. Again, two nails driven in a board at different angles will hold it in place much more firmly than the same nails would if they were driven at right angles with the face of the board.

Did you ever notice that in driving

Enterprise, Ont., Oct. 1st, 1908.
"For seven years I suffered with what physicians called a "Water Tumor." I could neither sit, stand, nor lie down. Hypodermics of morphia had to be given me to ease the pain.

MRS. JAMES FENWICK

My cure seemed hopeless, and my friends hourly expected my death. I was so bad that I wanted to die, and it was during one of these very bad spells that a family friend brought a box of "Fruit-a-tives" to the house. After much persuasion I commenced to take them, but I was so bad that it was only when I had taken nearly two boxes that I commenced to experience relief. I kept up the treatment, however, and after taking five boxes I was cured, and when I appeared on the street my friends said, "The dead has come to life," and this seemed literally true, because I certainly was at death's door."

CATARACT OF THE EYE.

It May Be Prevented by the Judicious
Use of Glasses

Among the diseases which are believed to belong peculiarly and of right to old age cataract is perhaps the most frequent. It is true there are cases of cataract in young children, and one may even be born blind, the absence of sight being due to nontransparency of the crystalline lens, but nine-tenths at least of the sufferers from this affection are past sixty years of age, and most of these have exceeded the limit of three-score and ten.

A cataract is an opaque condition of the crystalline lens, the body lying just behind the pupil. The opacity may exist in the body of the lens itself, or it may form a layer on its surface just beneath the capsule inclosing it. The cause of cataract is variously stated, but most authorities are agreed in regarding the opacity as a result of the vain efforts of the lens to change its shape in order to focus the rays of light exactly at the retina and so secure distinct vision. In youth this can be done readily by the little muscles within the eyeballs, but as the years go on the lens gets harder and less readily changes its shape, and soon after forty it is so hard that perfect accommodation, as this change of shape is called, is impossible.

That is the time for glasses, for astigmatism has not made them imperative before that. Many persons seem to be ashamed of glasses, thinking that the taking to them is a confession of age. So it is, perhaps, but the scowling and the drawing up of the features, which cannot be helped if glasses are refused, are a confession much more definite than the wearing of glasses.

Even more important, the putting on of glasses as soon as the slightest indistinctness of vision is perceived is an almost certain preventive of cataract. The pulling and hauling and tugging at the hardening lens which the eye muscles must do in order to change its shape for the varying needs of near and far sight irritate the lens and induce a low state of inflammation, which results in cataract.

When cataract is once established there is nothing for the sufferer to do but wait patiently for the so-called "ripening" of the process, when an operation will procure relief.—Youth's Companion.

Contraband.

A lady crossing from France to England was asked by the customs officer if she had anything dutiable. She assured him that she had nothing but wearing apparel in her trunks. But at the bottom of the largest one, which to him seemed the most suspicious, were found twelve bottles of brandy.

"Madam," said the officer sarcastically, "do you call these wearing apparel?"

"Certainly," she replied sweetly. "Those are my husband's nightcaps."

W. G. WILSON,

County Clerk.

Dated July 23rd, 1909.

A "Doubtful" Compliment.

After singing "Kathleen Mavourneen" as an encore at Cardiff, a few years ago, an amusing little incident occurred to Miss Clara Butt in connection with an old Irishman whom she found waiting for her when she left the concert hall. With tears in his eyes he caught hold of her cloak and, falling upon his knees, began to bless her in his rich brogue, "Bedad," he concluded, "I don't know who wrote the song, but sure, if he's dead, 'twould make him turn in his grave to have heard the way ye sang it to-night—a compliment which some people might think was rather a doubtful one."

Does Not Play Them Now.

There was once a man who was very fond of playing practical jokes, but stammered very badly. One day he was walking with a friend by the Thames, when they met an Irish sailor with an Indian parrot in a cage.

"W-watch me," said the joker; "I w-will have some f-fun w-w-with this m-man."

Stopping the sailor, he asked, "M-m-my good m-man, c-can that p-p-parrot talk?"

"Well," said the Irish sailor, "if he couldn't talk any better than you can I'd wring his bloomin' neck."

The Alligator and the Boots.

Here is a story of a disappointed alligator.

"The fisherman was fast asleep on the river bank when the alligator crawled up and tried to swallow him, but only succeeded in swallowing his boots, in which were so many snakes that the gator turned from the river and took to the woods, where in a vain effort to climb a tree he was shot by a nature taker and sold to a college museum as a hitherto unheard-of specimen of the saurian family."

How to Make Kitchen Aprons.

To the woman who does her own work there is great satisfaction in a neat, well-made apron, and such a necessary article may be easily and quickly made at home and prove much more attractive than the ready-made ones. An admirable apron is cut with a panel front that extends to the bust and fitted side gorges that are finished with a band of button around the waist. A bias band around the neck is slightly shaped and buttoned to the panel front, but may be shipped on over the head without unbuttoning. There is a shaped pocket at the side, and if one is desired on the front at the bust it may be added. Denims and percales in solid colors or checked ginghams are usually chosen for work aprons, but for more elaborate ones dotted or cross-barred muslins are very dainty and launder well. The latter may be touched up with lace edged ruffles put on with beading through which colored ribbons are run, pockets set on with fine fatherstitching or embroidery, and instead of the plain belt about the waist ribbon strings may be substituted.

STELLA FAIR.

Tuesday, Sept. 28th was a gala day at Stella occasioned by the Amherst Island Agricultural Annual Fair. At an early hour all kinds of equipages might be seen winding their way to the fair ground laden with all kinds of agricultural produce, be sides horses led by the halter, cattle and other live stock brought by the owners, each one considering his particular animal the best.

The judging commenced shortly after the arrival of the Aletha, which landed a number of visitors picked up on her way from the different ports she called at on her downward trip. The Presbyterian congregation prepared a dinner and had ample for all. On the whole everything during the day passed off most successfully.

MRS. ANNIE TESCH.

Now Eats and Sleeps Well.

Mrs. Annie Tesch, 837 22nd Avenue, Milwaukee, Wis., writes: "When I wrote to you for advice, my health was a total wreck. I could not sleep and thought I would die, as there seemed to be no help for me. But I followed your advice and took Peruna and Manalin.

"I am now cured. I can eat and sleep well, and enjoy life.

"I never will be without Peruna, should any of us be sick."

Catarrh of Worst Form.

Mrs. Amanda Long, 7237 Seelye Avenue, Chicago, Ill., writes:

"I believe that I am cured of catarrh of the worst form and of long standing. "I was almost a total wreck. I tried almost everything and doctored with a number of doctors, but they did me no good.

"I tried Peruna as a last resort, and by the time I had taken one bottle I could see that it was helping me, and so I continued taking it. I can say now that I have not felt the slightest symptoms for three months, and I think there is nothing like Peruna. I still keep it in the house, and think there is no medicine like it. I cannot praise it too highly, and bless the day that I learned of it."

Mrs. Judge J. F. Boyer, 1421 Sherman Avenue, Evanston, Ill., writes that several complications united in pulling her down, and she thanks Peruna for new life and strength.

Pain in the Stomach.

Mrs. Mois Parizeau, Ste. Julie de Veze, P. Q., Canada, writes that she suffered five years with pain in the stomach. The pains extended through her body, and she also had difficulty in breathing. Her husband heard of Peruna and bought five bottles. This treatment virtually cured her.

Who is best able to judge of the value of Pe-ru-na? The housewife who has used it in her home for years, or prejudiced, sensational writers who have never used Pe-ru-na in their lives? It will not take any fair-minded reader a minute to decide which is the best evidence. The mothers of the United States believe in Pe-ru-na. The half million women who praise Pe-ru-na receive no pay for doing so, and the half dozen editors who disparage Pe-ru-na get big pay for doing so. Which is the best evidence?

Sore Throat for Years.

Mrs. C. Dshel, 384 Irving Avenue, Chicago, Ill., Curator Natural History Society, writes:

"I am glad to be able to recommend Peruna for chronic sore throat. I had been troubled with sore throat for years, but could find nothing to help me. I had an awful gagging in the morning and was subject to dizzy spells. I could not draw a free breath and life had no pleasure for me. My throat was dry and parched.

"I supposed I was doomed to spend the rest of my days in this condition, when I heard what good Peruna had been to others, so I tried a bottle of it. After using it I was much better and six bottles of it cured me.

"I cannot say too much for Peruna, and I hope that some poor sufferer like myself will see this and give it a trial."

MRS. J.C. RUSSELL.

Acute Indigestion.

Mr. John C. Russell, 810 County Street, Portsmouth, Va., writes regarding his wife's case as follows:

"I thought it would be doing but justice to your great medicine to tell you what it has done for my wife.

"Two years ago the doctor called at our house, on an average, three times a week, in attendance upon my wife, who was suffering from acute indigestion. Her suffering was so great that nothing but morphine would give her relief.

"While on a visit to some friends in Norfolk she had an attack and I prepared to go for the doctor, when our friend proposed Peruna. I gave her a dose, repeating it in a half hour, and her pains passed away. Since that time my wife has gained thirty pounds.

"We are never out of Peruna. When the children or I have a cold we take some of mamma's Peruna. I find it has cut my doctor bills down to almost nothing."

Gained Thirty Pounds.

Good Kitchen Company.

One housewife in this town doesn't know anything about the servant problem, at least so much of it as has to do with the keeping of a maid of all work, the quality of such service not being counted. This is because her servants always become devoted to her because of her brightness and mag-

Pe-ru-na for Her Children.

Mrs. Alice Bogle, 883 Clinton St., Circleville, Ohio, writes:

"I want to inform you what Peruna has done for me.

"I have been afflicted with catarrh for several years. I have tried different medicines and none seemed to do me any good until I used Peruna. I have taken six bottles and can praise it very highly for the good it has done me.

"I also find it of great benefit to my children."

THE TEST OF CHRISTIANITY

The Church Is What Its People Are, and the Duty Involved Comes Back to the Individual

"Why call ye me Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?"—Luke vi., 46.

The Christian religion has always talked about the cross as its central fact, but it has nevertheless in practice actually relegated it to a fiction. Religious people regard as a charming figure of speech that which they profess to believe to have been one of the sternest realities in the life of their great leader.

The eternal temptation is to explain Jesus of Nazareth instead of following him, to count ourselves as satisfactory if we take what we call the right attitude toward him, avow our faith in his attributes and authority, and stand ready to defend him with syllogism against all the assaults of his critics. But a teacher's worth depends not on the ability of people to analyze him but on their catching his vision and power.

The contemplation of Christ is continually being substituted for the character of Christ. Men worship him by admiring terms, they are judged by their theories as to his divinity, and seldom or never by their likeness to his divineness. They mock his character by analyzing it instead of making it their inspiration to seek

THE SAME PATH OF LIFE.

Lay our lives beside his and how do they look? Compare the church with her master, or, better, test it by the community in which it stands. Do the needy, the sad, the disconsolate, the erring, the perplexed, seek it out? Is it to them an asylum, a refuge, a living loving friend? This is the test of Christianity. No matter how ornate its building, how elegant its services, how orthodox its doctrines, the church is worthy only as it moves amongst men as their burden bearer.

What need is there to remind ourselves how unlike to this many churches are? Often the stained glass serves but to hide the sight of squalor and the peal of the organ to drown the wail of woe. It seems a thing apart, set to save itself, or to serve as an oasis for duly accredited travelers in the dreary desert of daily life, instead of being a servant in the midst of people, a refreshing stream to turn the whole desert into one great garden of the Lord.

It is an easy matter to criticize the church for her failure to go about doing good, for being so engrossed in her burdens that she has no strength for those of the world. But criticism is not cure. And all our criticism is but self-accusation. A congregation composed of individuals who have been silencing conscience dominant all the week will be likely to want it soothed by soporific syllogisms on Sunday.

Often the most logical arguments on the divinity of the Lord come from the lips of those who lead the most diabolical lives.

THE CONSTANT DANGER

is that we shall substitute the logic of a theory for the living of its principle. It is of no value to this world to prove that a man once was divine if men are not to-day actually becoming more divine.

Living is religion's most convincing logic. In the field of metaphysics most minds wander as in a maze; in the field of character and conduct even a child finds the way. They who love do not need to argue about love; they who live its faith can let it speak for itself. No one makes any mistake who reads the religion of a life.

Both those who are seeking to a force a "shibboleth" on the world and those who are criticizing the church for her vain pretenses are wasting time. The day is so short and human need so great; the night comes soon when we can no longer show the right life and the true love for one another. Why waste our hours debating over history, seeking agreement on words?

If we really desire the best and holiest things, if we seek the heavenly life for all, must we not lay aside the weapons of mutual conflict and take up the tools of human service? The better day for which all long will not come by any agreement on words, but it will be hastened by honest, helpful kindness, right and love to which all worthy leaders have called us.

apostle's life (compare Rom. 1. 11, and Acts 19. 21).

12. The Jews banded themselves together—These were probably the extreme members of the "zealot" party referred to in the last lesson (Acts 21. 28). They invoked the vengeance of God upon them if they failed to carry out their purpose.

14, 15. Came to the chief priests and the elders—The majority of these were unquestionably of the Sadducees' party, and would use their influence with the council to have the captain bring Paul once more before them.

16. Paul's sister's son—The only mention of the family of Paul. Because of the improbability of this sister being a permanent resident of the city, it has been conjectured that perhaps this lad was a student at Jerusalem, as his uncle had been.

19. The chief captain took him by the hand—Paul was now a prison-

CUT OUT

"You're late to-night," remarked the younger Miss Patch, as her sister dropped into a chair and began to draw out her hatpins.

"Been extra busy," replied the elder girl. "I—Why, what's the matter with mother?"

Mrs. Patch, seated by the window, delivered herself of an indignant sniff, and intimated her conviction that, of all the impudent young 'ussies that ever lived, that there Hannie was the very worst!

"What have you been doing to her?" queried the elder Miss Patch, taking off her hat.

Miss Annie rose from her chair, and, gracefully crooking her right arm, walked mincingly across the room in a fashion intended to represent the action of a bridegroom leading his bride away from the altar.

"We're going to have a new parlor," said the sprightly girl, when her progress was interfered with the wall.

"What!" exclaimed her sister, staring at her in blank amazement.

"I say we're going to have a new parlor," repeated Annie, resuming her seat, and folding her arms with a truculent flourish. "She"—indicating her mother by a little jerk of her head—"has made all the necessary arrangements."

"Why, mother," said her elder daughter, in a tone of horror, "you don't really mean to say that it's true?"

"True?" cried Mrs. Patch hotly. "Of course it's true! Why shouldn't it be?"

Miss Mary Patch, without replying, gazed at her parent fixedly for a while.

"Who is it, mother?" she said at last.

"Find out!" snapped Mrs. Patch. "That's just what I'm trying to do," answered Mary, with a sarcastic smile. "Surely it isn't that wretched little Hinks?"

Mrs. Patch, without deigning to reply, marched out of the room.

The two girls stared at one another in disgust for a while, and then the younger one expressed the opinion that her sister's shot at the gentleman's identity had hit the mark.

"I've often wondered why he came hanging about here such a lot," she added.

"Well, so have I," said Mary; "although, to tell you the truth, I—I—"

"You what?" queried Annie, as she hesitated.

"I thought he was coming after me," she confessed, with a slight accession of color. "The nasty, blushing, stammering, fat little wretch!"

She broke off suddenly, walked to the window, and gazed out at the darkening street with an air of deep abstraction.

Then suddenly she uttered an exclamation of annoyance, and began to let down the window-blind.

"Daddy's coming up the street, with his best clothes on, and a rose the size of a cauliflower in his buttonhole!" she announced, with a vicious little laugh.

"What, Hinks?" said Annie, snatching a box of matches off the mantelpiece and lighting the gas. "Then that settles it," she con-

me to-night," she remarked. "I was thinking we'd finished supper."

"Annie," commanded Mrs. Patch, "you come 'ere and 'elp me. This sister of yourn has gone loony!"

"No, I haven't," said Miss Patch as she relinquished the tray to the younger girl. "I'm only—"

"Only what?" inquired her mother disagreeably, as she came to a halt.

"Oh, nothing!" she answered, sitting down and heaving another sigh.

She looked coyly at Mr. Hinks, smiled confidentially, and said to him:

"I saw you as I was coming home to-night."

"Did you?" replied Mr. Hinks, with a note of awakening tenderness in his voice.

"You didn't see me, though," continued Miss Patch reproachfully.

Mr. Hinks, unable to deny the soft impeachment, intimated his intention of keeping a better look-out in future.

"Ah, I dare say," answered Miss Patch, "you'd have seen me fast enough if I'd been mother!"

Mr. Hinks, with a side-glance at the ample proportions of Mrs. Patch, checked himself on the verge of the remark that it would be difficult to do otherwise, and substituted a statement to the effect that he must have been unusually busy at the time.

With an amount of enterprise foreign to his everyday character, he tilted his chair back on to its hind legs, and shyly wriggled it in the direction of his companion.

Miss Patch, with faint traces of a smile about the corners of her mouth, executed a similar manoeuvre, and so maintained the distance between them.

"I'm afraid you're not to be trusted," she remarked, with a fascinating air of defiance.

"Yes, I am," protested Mr. Hinks, blushing again so uproariously that some polished tin canisters on the mantelpiece caught the glow and shone redly.

"Ah, I don't know!" said Miss Patch, wagging her head at him skeptically. "I should like to have been able to hear all that you were saying to that Mrs.—er—Mrs. Blowman!"

"All that I said to 'er," declared Mr. Hinks, with intense earnestness, "was—"

"Supper's ready!" announced Mrs. Patch, from the other side of the room, in a voice that suggested that vinegar would enter largely into the composition of the meal.

"Oh, bother supper!" said Miss Patch, crossing her feet, clasping her hands behind her head, and gazing wistfully at the ceiling. "I don't want any."

"Well, don't 'ave any, then!" said her mother.

"I'm not going to," she answered quietly. "I shall go out for a stroll in the moonlight while you're eating yours!"

"No, you won't," asserted her mother, with great firmness. "You stay where you are, miss!"

Mr. Hinks, after a nervous glance at his hostess, intimated that if lack of an escort was all that stood in the way, he was prepared to take the role upon himself.

"But what about your supper?" said Miss Patch, rising to her feet with almost unmaidenly alacrity.

"I—I don't care much about it," replied the gentleman hastily. "I'd lead tea rather late!"

"Then if mother doesn't mind—" began Miss Patch demurely. The younger Miss Patch looked

Time: Same, as last lesson.
Places: Jerusalem, Antipatris, Cæsarea.
Persons: Paul, the Sanhedrin, chief priests, Claudius Lysias, forty Zealots, Paul's nephew, centurions, soldiers; Felix, the governor.
Links: The chief captain, fearing to do an injustice to Paul, a Roman, arranged a hearing for him before the principal religious authorities of Jerusalem.
Point of the Narrative: Taking advantage of a division among the religious rulers, between Sadducees and Pharisees, Paul succeeded in winning some of the Jews to his side, but the more bitter of his foes plotted to take his life. News of this being carried to the chief captain by Paul's nephew, arrangements were made for Paul's secret transference, by night, and a heavy guard, to Cæsarea, the abode of the Roman governor.

Chapter 22, verse 30. Desiring to know the certainty wherefore he was accused—As a Roman officer, the captain was bound to see that justice was done to a Roman citizen.

The chief priests and all the council—These were, of course, the chief religious authorities, and the captain was assured that the difficulty was a religious one. The council was the Sanhedrin.

Chapter 23, verse 2. Ananias—He held the high priesthood from A. D. 47 to 59, and was noted for his violence of temper.

To smite him—Compare the treatment of our Lord (John 18: 22). In Paul's case the blow was struck either because he, being a prisoner, spoke before he was asked, or because the high priest disapproved of what he considered presumptuous language.

3. God shall smite thee—This prophecy was fulfilled, according to Josephus, who says that Ananias met a violent death. Comparison is often made between this utterance and that of Jesus when similarly provoked.

Thou whitest wall—Expression for a hypocrite. Like a wall which has been limewashed in order to conceal the filth, so this priest bore the semblance of justice, but was really most unjust.

Contrary to law—From John 7: 51, we learn that a prisoner had a right to be heard before being judged.

5. I know not . . . he was high priest—A plausible explanation of this ignorance is, that Paul was troubled with defective eyesight.

Thou shalt not speak evil of a ruler—Exod. 22: 28.

6. Perceived . . . one part . . . Sadducees and the other Pharisees—There was probably some mark of dress which a Jew would readily detect. Paul's use of the rivalry between the two parties was simply a means of getting a hearing for the preaching of the resurrection of the dead, upon which both the Pharisees' faith and Christianity rested.

9. What if a spirit hath spoken to him, or an angel?—A thing which the Sadducees considered impossible.

10. Fearing lest Paul should be torn in pieces—By his speech Paul had won the sympathy of the Pharisees, and his person, consequently, became a bone of contention between the two parties.

The soldiers—They were present in great numbers in Jerusalem at this time, owing to the excited state of the populace.

11. Paul witness also at Rome—This was the great desire of the their influence with the council to have the captain bring Paul once more before them.

16. Paul's sister's son—The only mention of the family of Paul. Because of the improbability of this sister being a permanent resident of the city, it has been conjectured that perhaps this lad was a student at Jerusalem, as his uncle had been.

19. The chief captain took him by the hand—Paul was now a prisoner only for his own protection. A messenger from him, as a Roman citizen, would receive consideration.

21. The promise from thee—That he would bring Paul down for another trial.

23. As far as Cæsarea—A distance of about seventy miles. There was the residence of the Roman governor and the seat of jurisdiction.

The third hour of the night—9 p. m.

24. Felix the governor—This infamous ruler was made procurator of Judæa by the emperor in A. D. 50, through the influence of Pallas, the brother of Felix and the favorite of Claudius. From his cognomen, Antonias, he appears to have been a freedman of the emperor's mother, Antonia. His character was corrupt and his methods both cruel and violent. He was recalled toward the close of Paul's two years of imprisonment at Cæsarea, and succeeded by Festus.

25. A letter after this form—The captain puts the case in a manner wholly favorable to himself, omitting all mention of his illegal order to scourge Paul, and gives himself the credit of rescuing a man who was a Roman, whereas he did not know him to be a Roman until he had bound him with chains and heard Paul's protest.

31. Antipatris—Rebuilt by Herod the Great, and named after his father, Antipater. Forty-two miles from Jerusalem, standing at the foot of the hills in a fertile plain.

32. Left the horsemen to go with him—At so great a distance from the city a guard of seventy was now sufficient. That Lysias thought it necessary to set out with a detachment of four hundred and seventy shows the desperate state of the province. There was disaffection everywhere owing to the folly and cruelty of Felix.

34. Cilicia—Judæa and Cilicia were minor provinces attached to the superior province of Syria. Thus Felix would conclude at once that the case came within his jurisdiction.

35. To be kept in Herod's palace—Both the verb and the noun imply that the apostle was not closely confined. This palace was built by Herod as a residence, and Paul's quarters must have been close to those of Felix (compare Acts 24: 24).

NO TIME FOR FIREWORKS.

The brave ship was wallowing in the waves that threatened to engulf her at any moment.

Hastily the captain ordered a box of rockets and flares to be brought to the rail, and with his own hands ignited a number of them in the hope that they would be seen and the passengers and crew rescued.

Amid the glare of the rockets, a tall, thin, austere-looking individual found his way to the skipper.

"Captain," said he, "I must protest against this foolhardiness. We are now facing death; this is no time for fireworks!"

Give a woman plenty of rope and she will hang—her washing on it.

Then suddenly she uttered an exclamation of annoyance, and began to let down the window-blind.

"Daddy's coming up the street, with his best clothes on, and a rose the size of a cauliflower in his buttonhole!" she announced, with a vicious little laugh.

"What, Hinks?" said Annie, snatching a box of matches off the mantelpiece and lighting the gas. "Then that settles it," she continued, as her sister nodded in reply. "He's the man, sure enough!"

She picked up a book from the table, pushed a wicker-chair as far into the corner of the room as it would go, seated herself, and began to read with great energy.

Mary, fidgeting about the room, with a mysterious little smile on her face, seemed to be listening for something.

There came a nervous, uncertain knock at the front door, and Mary tipped away to answer it.

"Mother'll be here in a minute, Mr. Hinks," she said, leading the visitor in, and smiling upon him sweetly. "Annie, tell mother that Mr. Hinks has come."

"Mother!" Annie yelled. "Here's Mr. Hinks!"

"Fine evenin'!" said the gentleman, plumping into a chair, and wiping his moist bald head with a huge pocket-handkerchief.

"Beautiful!" replied Miss Patch. A fleeting look of mischief flickered in her eyes for an instant as she glanced at the student in the corner, but when she turned to Mr. Hinks again her expression was entirely soulful.

"I was watching the sunset lie out of the sky, when I saw you turn into the street," she murmured, looking shyly at the toe of her right boot.

"Was you really?" said Mr. Hinks, running the hankerchief round the lining of his hat.

"And—and thinking," she continued, "how sweet it would be if only one could spread one's wings and fly after it!"

"It would indeed," agreed Mr. Hinks.

"I often feel like that," proceeded Miss Patch, after giving vent to a tiny, fluttering sigh. "Mother says I'm too romantic, but I dare say she was the same when she was my age. Are you romantic, Mr. Hinks?"

"I—I 'ardly know," stammered Mr. Hinks nervously.

"Oh, it's you, is it?" said Mrs. Patch, entering the room, with a tablecloth tucked under one arm, and a tray loaded with supper materials in her hands. "I thought I knew the knock!"

She was apparently on the point of saying something else; but, catching sight of her elder daughter's attitude, she checked herself and compressed her lips.

Miss Patch, with a knee clasped between her interlaced fingers, was eyeing Mr. Hinks with a look of rapt admiration.

"P'raps you'll 'elp me with these 'ere supper things!" snapped her mother, after a momentary pause. "Now, now, be careful!" she continued sharply, as the girl essayed to take the tray from her with one hand. "Do you want to let the 'ole blessed lot down?"

"I wasn't thinking what I was doing," apologized Mary, with an air of detachment.

"You very rarely are!" declared her mother, with great tartness. "Now, then, where are you a-going to with that tray?"

The absent-minded Mary, well on her way towards the kitchen, turned back with a little laugh.

"I don't know what's wrong with lack of an escort was all that stood in the way, he was prepared to take the role upon himself.

"But what about your supper?" said Miss Patch, rising to her feet with almost unmaidenly alacrity.

"I—I don't care much about it," replied the gentleman hastily. "I 'ad tea rather late!"

"Then if mother doesn't mind—" began Miss Patch demurely.

The younger Miss Patch looked at her mother in mock sympathy as the front door closed with a gentle slam, and remarked that it was too bad of Mary.

"What's too bad?" replied Mrs. Patch, blowing thoughtfully at a steaming cup of cocoa.

"Why, going on with him like that!" said Annie, wrestling with a grin.

"Is it?" said Mrs. Patch abstractedly, as she took a series of noisy sips.

"I suppose you won't have any more to do with him after this?" continued Annie.

"Im? What, Hinks?" said Mrs. Patch, with the air of one coming suddenly out of a brown study. "And why not?"

The astounded Annie uttered a gasp of surprise, and sat staring in open-mouthed silence at her mother.

"What's it got to do with me?" continued Mrs. Patch. "It's no business of mine, is it, if she likes to make a fool of him?"

"And you're still going to marry him?" faltered her daughter.

"Marry 'im!" cried Mrs. Patch. "Marry Hinks! Why, the girl's mad!"

"B-but you said you were!" stammered Annie.

"That I never did!" returned Mrs. Patch fiercely. "How dare you sit there and tell me such an untruth?"

"I mean, we thought you were," said Annie helplessly.

"Ho!" laughed her mother scornfully. "You did, did you? I see the little game now. Perhaps it'll interest you, my lady, to 'ear that it's Mr. Franks as I'm going to marry. He'll be round 'ere to-morrow night. If your sister's busy with Mr. Hinks, maybe you'd like to try your 'and on 'im. Don't go too far, though, for I might box your ears!"—London Answers.

THE KING'S GRAPES.

The Yield of the Famous Vine at Windsor.

The famous old vine near Cumberland Lodge, Windsor (Egham Park), in which the King and Queen and members of the Royal Family take much interest, is bearing over 500 splendid bunches of Black Hamburg grapes this year, many of the bunches being well over four pounds in weight.

Formerly the great vine, which is nearly 140 years old, yielded over 1,400 bunches, but the King's gardener has reduced the number in late years. Last year about 800 bunches were cut for the royal tables. The quality of the grapes this season is finer than ever.

The Princess of Wales and some of her children recently visited the vine, and her Royal Highness expressed her admiration of the old vine, which is 120 feet in length, 20 feet wide, and covers a roof area of 2,400 feet.

The grapes are preferred by the King and Queen to any in the royal gardens, and they are always forwarded to their Majesties wherever the latter are staying.

SEASONABLE RECIPES.

Fresh Cucumbers in Winter.—Fill glass jars with cucumbers slightly seasoned with salt. Cover with water. Remove bubbles by passing a fork through them. Put tops on jars and stand upside down to test for leakage. When put up this way cucumbers taste as fresh as when gathered from the vines.

Baked Potatoes.—Do not have the oven too hot for baked potatoes. If done in a moderate oven for a longer time they will cook more evenly. Pricking the small ends of a potato with a fork before putting in the oven will keep the skin from bursting. A German cook noted for her baked potatoes washes them carefully, dries them, and then rubs the skin with a greased paper and bakes in the usual way. A pleasant variety of baked potatoes is to peel them, rub them over with a greased paper dipped in butter, and bake in the ordinary way.

To Can Tomatoes Whole.—Select tomatoes of equal size which will easily slip into a half gallon fruit jar. If a tomato is too large the seeds will squeeze out and spoil the appearance of the canned fruit. Have the jar setting in a pail which has a little hot water in it. Scald and peel the tomatoes and drop into the jar until full. Pour boiling water into the jar until it runs over enough to take every bubble out. Seal and let stand in the hot water until cold. These can be sliced as nicely as fresh tomatoes and seasoned when served. Will keep for years.

To Preserve Cucumbers.—Take small cucumbers and slice; put salt on this and let stand over night; then put layer of cucumber and sprinkle with black and white mustard and celery seed, and a tablespoonful of olive oil and half a cupful of vinegar. Follow this process until the jar is full. Then put away and use when cold.

Uncooked Chilli Sauce.—One-half peck of tomatoes chopped, three stalks celery cut fine, one cupful of grated horseradish, two red peppers and one cupful of onions chopped fine, one small cupful of salt, one cupful each of black and white mustard seed, two teaspoonfuls of cinnamon, one teaspoonful cloves, one teaspoonful of mace, one cupful of white sugar and one quart of cider vinegar. Stir all well together, do not cook and keep sealed tight. The feature of this sauce is that it retains the flavor of the fresh tomatoes, and if ripe and sound tomatoes are used it will keep as well as the cooked chilli sauce.

Butterscotch.—Three cupfuls of white sugar, one-half cupful of water, one-half cupful of vinegar, one tablespoonful of butter, eight drops of extract of lemon. Boil without stirring till it will snap and break. Just before taking from the fire add one-fourth teaspoonful of soda. Pour into buttered biscuit tins and mark into inch squares when cold.

Tapioca Pudding.—Put to soak over night two-thirds of a cupful of pearl tapioca. When ready next day to make the pudding beat the yolks of two eggs until light, add one pint of sweet milk, one-fourth cupful of sugar, mix well, add to the tapioca. Put on to cook and add salt to suit taste. Cut up tomatoes and sprinkle salt through them; stand over night, drain off in morning and put all through a food chopper and boil one hour.

To Can Corn.—For eight quarts of corn, which require three dozen ears, allow one ounce of tartaric acid. Cut corn from cob, cook twenty minutes in water, enough to cover, then stir in the acid, cook a little longer and seal in glass jars. When wanted for use empty contents of can in saucepan, add pinch of soda, let boil a few minutes, pour off liquid and season as you would fresh corn. Corn and tomatoes are also nice canned together. Cook together and seal. This makes a tempting dish in winter.

Tomato Kromesies.—Beat lightly the yolk of one egg, add three tablespoonfuls of cold water, one-half a cup of sifted flour, and one-quarter teaspoonful of salt. Stir in one teaspoonful of melted butter, then beat until the butter is smooth and bubbly. Stir in lightly the stiffly beaten white of the egg, then set away in a cool place for several hours. Choose ten tomatoes which are firm and as small as possible. Scald and peel them. Have ready some grated cheese, seasoned, using for each cupful of the cheese a quarter of a teaspoonful of salt, one-third of a teaspoonful of salt, one-third of a teaspoonful of paprika, one-quarter of a teaspoonful of ground mustard, a small pinch each of thyme and ground cloves. Roll each tomato in the prepared cheese until thickly coated, let stand for about fifteen minutes, then dip carefully in the butter already prepared and plunge into smoking hot fat. Fry a golden brown, drain and serve garnished with parsley.

THE LAUNDRY.

Sprinkling Clothes.—If for any reason you have not sprinkled your clothes the night before you wish to iron them, try sprinkling them with boiling hot water. Use a clean whisk broom, as it sprinkles them much finer and even than by dipping the water in your hand. As soon as your clothes are sprinkled, and tightly rolled up, put on your irons to heat. By the time they are hot your clothes will be ready to iron as nicely as if they had lain over night. Always iron the linen last, as they require more darkness.

Perspiration Stains.—After taking off a garment wet with perspiration, drop it in cold water. Let it soak a while, then rinse it well and dry. Perspiration turns white goods yellow, discolors colored clothes, makes them tender, and causes the goods to split. Putting away damp clothes makes them mildew.

Washing Made Easy.—Soap white cloth well and put in cold water over night to soak. This will loosen all dirt and requires no rubbing. Heat boiler of soap suds early next morning. Rinse clothes, put in water, and boil about twenty minutes. Remove from boiler, rinse well, blue, starch, and hang out. Your clothes will be nice and white with only one-third the usual labor.

Little Helps.—Before washing look over all linen for spots. Tea and coffee stains usually yield to hot water when poured steadily through them. Fruit stains, or in fact any stain can always be removed by rubbing pure glycerine into them before putting into water. After washing dry in hot

PERSONAL POINTERS.

Interesting Gossip About Some Notable People.

Dr. Walter C. Smith, the Scotch preacher, once tried to explain to an old lady the meaning of the Scriptural expression, "Take up thy bed and walk." He said the bed was simply a mat or rug, easily taken up and carried away. "No, no," replied the lady, "I cannot believe that. The bed was a regular four-poster. There would be no miracle in walking away with a bit of mat or rug on your back."

The German Empress, though somewhat overshadowed, the world thinks, by the Kaiser, is a woman of very real influence in her own circle, and is simply worshipped by her husband and children. The love her sons bear her is well illustrated by a story told of the Crown Prince in his boyhood. The Court chaplain was one day giving the Prince religious instruction and trying to impress upon him that all people are sinners. "Well," blurted out His Imperial Highness, "father may be a sinner, as you say, but I'm quite sure mother isn't."

One of the most interesting ventures made by business minded titled ladies is that of Lady Algernon Gordon-Lennox, who is trying to popularize the bottled-fruit trade in England. In the village of Broughton she has established, on a modest scale, a fruit-bottling business. Superintending all details herself, she produced 120 dozen bottles of fruit, and sold them in three months. This year she cannot meet the demand, although her produce has amounted to 160 dozen bottles.

It is a somewhat curious fact, perhaps, that as a boy Mr. Marconi showed little signs of cleverness. One of his teachers, in fact, once said of him that he could never learn anything by heart. Nevertheless, he was only twenty-one when he began to startle the world with his demonstrations of wireless telegraphy. In spite of his fame, Marconi is one of the most unassuming of men, and hates demonstrations. He was once recognized while walking in Rome. Immediately a cheering crowd assembled. Marconi bolted into what he thought was an empty carriage. But it contained a lady who was too frightened to expostulate. The inventor quickly made his apologies, and the lady allowed him to remain until they were free of the crowd.

It is not often that a Prince is snubbed, but this happened once, at least, to H. R. H. the Prince of Wales. During his first visit with the Princess to Australia he was out walking one Sunday afternoon with his host, an important official. They happened to pass a Sunday-school just as the scholars were coming out, and, naturally, the children followed the distinguished pedestrians. At last the host asked them to run away, and all except one little girl did so. The tiny tot continued to gaze with innocent awe at the Prince. At last the latter took her hand, walked some little distance, and then said: "Now you have had a walk with me, run away and play." Immediately came the quaintly-severe reply: "Please, sir, we don't play on Sunday."

CONVICTS AS HUNTERS

REMARKABLE STORY OF THEIR ESCAPE.

Were Seven Days in a Boat in Heavy Weather—Boat Dashed to Pieces.

The three survivors of the five convicts who escaped recently from the Andamans told the following remarkable story of their escape and the adventures which followed it.

On the morning of May 28 six convicts—Bissan Singh, under sentence of fifteen years; a Bengali (term of seven years), and four Burmans, Nga Naing, Nga Tun, Nga Pya, and Nga Po Lu, all "lifers," under the charge of two military policemen with two Martini-Henry rifles and one hundred rounds of ammunition were sent in a forest boat to a small island in the Middle Andamans with seven days' rations for each convict and the policemen.

On reaching the island Bissan Singh, Nga Naing, Nga Pya and Nga Tun were sent to work, while the two policemen with Nga Po Lu and Bengali went up hill in search of a "golden" bird that is highly prized in Port Blair and has a ready sale. The policemen, before leaving, took off (the recaptured convicts state) their bandoliers of cartridges and laid them with the rifles in the bottom of the boat, which had been hauled up on the beach and made fast. Po Lu, who was professed to know where birds were to be found in plenty, and led the policemen and the Bengali into dense underbush, then gave them the slip, and made his way quickly back to the other men.

The men got the boat into the water and raising the sail started in the direction of the Burma coast. A strong wind, almost a gale, was blowing when they left the island, but the boat, which had both sail and oars, proved seaworthy, and after seven days heavy weather they reached the Tenasserim coast only to have the boat dashed to pieces on the rocks.

They managed to save what rations were left, however, before the mishap occurred which prevented their continuing further along the coast as was intended. Nga Naing, Nga Tun and Bissan Singh were very ill during the voyage to the Burma coast. Po Lu and Nga Pya, who were well throughout, assumed command of the party and took charge of the guns and ammunition. The men went northward until the food supply gave out and one of the party returned to Ye to buy rice, where he explained the possession of Government arms by saying that they were Government elephant hunters.

The party received every assistance, then struck out for the Siamese border, which they reached after some weeks hard travel, privation and delays through three of the party being ill. They crossed the Siamese border.

the fire add one-fourth teaspoonful of soda. Pour into buttered biscuit tins and mark into inch squares when cold.

Tapioca Pudding.—Put to soak over night two-thirds of a cupful of pearl tapioca. When ready next day to make the pudding beat the yolks of two eggs until light, add one pint of sweet milk, one-fourth cupful of sugar, mix well, add to the tapioca. Put on to cook and add a small lump of butter. Flavor with vanilla. Stir while cooking to prevent scorching, or cook in a double boiler. When cooked fold in the whites of two eggs which have previously been beaten to a stiff front, and beat briskly for a few minutes. This makes it extremely light. Serve with cream or rich milk. This is far superior to the old way of baking the pudding and more palatable.

THREE SALADS.

Stuffed Totato Salad.—To serve two dozen tomatoes, cut small piece from top of each, after scalding and peeling. Chop one cucumber and two green peppers after removing seeds of peppers. Scoop out a third of each tomato and add to chopped mixture. Salt and add lemon juice to taste; drain off surplus juice. Stuff tomatoes with mixture, set on ice, and when ready to serve, add mayonnaise, stiff enough not to run, to top of each.

Beet Salad.—Two quarts of chopped beets, two quarts of chopped cabbage, two cupfuls of sugar, one cupful grated horseradish, dessert spoonful of salt, pepper to taste, and cold vinegar to cover. This makes a gallon jar full and will keep all winter.

Delicious Fruit Salad.—Take the contents of a box of pink gelatin, pour over it one-fourth of a pint of cold water, and let stand five minutes. Pour into this mixture one and a half pints of boiling water, stirring thoroughly until dissolved. Add the juice of three large lemons and sugar to suit the taste. Strain through a cloth and let stand until cool. Then pour the gelatin over some raisins, sliced oranges, and bananas and set away in the refrigerator until it becomes hardened, which will take from four to five hours. To serve: Take several large naval oranges, using one for each person to be served and cut off about one-third of each orange, remove the inside carefully so as not to break the rind, then place the rinds in a pan of ice-water until they become firm. When firm enough remove from the water and fill each one with the prepared gelatin, over which put whipped cream, being careful to allow a little of the pink gelatin to peep through. Place a few maraschino cherries on top of the whipped cream. Place some nice, crisp lettuce leaves on the fruit plates, set the prepared oranges on the leaves, and lay a few cherries around on the green leaves, also a small slice or two of orange. This makes an attractive as well as an excellent dessert.

CANNING, PRESERVING.

To Keep Jellies from Molding.—Keep a box or bunches of thyme where the jellies are kept, which should be in a dark place, and you will have no mold.

Green Tomato Sauce.—One peck of green tomatoes, one head of cabbage, ten large onions, one large head of celery, two green peppers, two pounds of brown sugar, one tablespoonful of mustard seed, three quarts of vinegar and out. Your clothes will be nice and white with only one-third the usual labor.

Little Helps.—Before washing look over all linen for spots. Tea and coffee stains usually yield to hot water when poured steadily through them. Fruit stains, or in fact any stain, can always be removed by rubbing pure glycerine into them before putting into water. After washing dry in hot sunshine.

Never let starch touch the linen. In doing up handsome pieces after drying, dip into hot water, wring out well, roll up for a few minutes, then iron. Linen will stand much hotter irons than other cloth.

Iron napkins on wrong side, then right, until perfectly dry. Carefully fold. After the cloth has been folded once roll on a pole, so when used it will have only one fold down the middle. In short, to have beautifully laundered linen, dry in the hot sun, sprinkle with hot water, use hot irons, and plenty of pressure, and fold exactly even.

Glossy Effect.—It is advisable when washing, to put a little gum arabic in the starch. Dissolve half a teaspoonful of the gum arabic in boiling water, and when cool add to the starch. Linen, when starched with this mixture, will have a beautiful gloss. It is the only method by which the same exquisite finish can be obtained on linen goods as when first displayed for sale in the store window.

Removing Clothes from Boiler.—When washing, to avoid scalding fingers in catching the clothes up over the clothes stick in removing the clothes from the boiler use a pinching clothespin. Catch clothes with this and throw up over the stick.

Easy Methods.—Shave one bar of soap, pour two quarts water over it, put on stove to boil; when it comes to a boil add one large tablespoonful of coal oil, allow to boil until all soap is dissolved, which generally takes ten minutes. Soak clothes in cold water (hard or soft) overnight; in morning wring out the clothes, have boilerful of good warm water (not hot), add over half solution to boiler and sort clothes and put into boiler. After they come to a boil, boil for twenty minutes; remove to tub of water, rinse thoroughly and put through bluing water, starch, and hang out. For second boiler be sure and add cold water to cool water and add remainder of solution. Unless clothes are extremely soiled they will not need one particle of rubbing; if badly soiled, rub the soiled places with soap before putting in to boil.

Ice Water Help.—"Don't be afraid of plenty ice water." To remove all food, butter, olive oil, fruit or coffee marks from any garment of any fabric apply immediately plenty of ice water, rub quickly with clean napkin until dry.

ONLY A "BERTH" MARK.

An Irishman, who had just come from Dublin to Glasgow to seek employment, was informed that he had a poor chance of getting a job because he was displaying marks consistent with pugilism.

"You mane that I've a black eye, sir, eh?"

"Exactly."
"Shure, that's only a birth-mark which I have. You see, sir, I was coming from Dublin on the boat, an' by a mistake I went into the wrong berth, and the fellow who was there gave me this."

The latter took her band, worked some little distance, and then said: "Now you have had a walk with me, run away and play." Immediately came the quaintly-severe retort: "Please, sir, we don't play on Sunday!"

Queen Wilhelmina. Europe's only female ruler, is twenty-eight years of age. Until her birth, the Salic Law, by which no woman could reign, had been in force, but this was put aside by Wilhelmina's father in his daughter's interest. This applies also to the little Princess Juliana. It is said that, although Princess Wilhelmina was her father's constant companion, she did not realize her Royal position until the latter's seventieth birthday. As she stood at the window listening to the crowds that cheered the King, she turned to her governess, and said, with an air of dawning intelligence: "Why, the King is my father!" Her Majesty succeeded to the throne as the first Queen of the Netherlands when ten years of age. Since then she has been the idol of her people, who have, with simple earnestness, shared in her sorrows and in her rejoicings.

It is probable that Dr. Richard Strauss, the famous musical composer, will become the richest musician who has ever lived. He is well paid for every note he writes, and already his great works, "Sinfonia Domestica," "Salome," "Electra," etc., have brought him in large incomes. The doctor disposed of the score of "Salome" for a mere $12,500, but he got $27,500 for the copyright of "Electra," and, in addition, it is said that he gets a royalty of 75 cents on every copy of the latter sold. Then, as general musical director of the Royal Opera House in Berlin, Dr. Strauss is paid $5,000 for three months' work in the year. From all sources, Dr. Strauss's income now probably exceeds $60,000. But, with all his wealth, this great musician is a plain, unaffected man, and lives very quietly in a small flat in Berlin.

MEAT AND STATURE.

An Authority Gives Reasons for Beef-Eating in Japan.

Japan's belief in the virtues of a meat diet, which has taken the head of the Japanese Government Cattle-breeding Department to England to purchase stock cattle, has aroused the indignation of British vegetarians, is part of the movement for the Europeanization of the land of the Rising Sun.

"In a few years the better classes in Japan will be living and eating in European fashion," said a well-known authority on Japan. "Already many wealthy Japanese have two houses, often side by side, a Japanese house in which they live as their fathers lived, and a European house in which their children are fed, educated, and clothed in European fashion. In the latter house the children are encouraged to sit on chairs, eat meat with knives and forks, and talk English. The result will soon be seen in the improvement of the physique of the next generation. The movement receives the support of the Emperor."

"There can be no doubt that a meat diet adds to the stature of the Japanese, though it may not increase their wonderful powers of endurance. The wrestlers of Japan, who are huge mountains of bone and muscle, are all fed on beef and other meats."

and on the verge of starvation they recrossed the frontier to the little hamlet of Kyunchoung, Amherst district, to try and get food. They went to the house of a cultivator on the outskirts of the town to whom they said they were Government elephant hunters. After they had been fed the tea house Goung was sent for, to whom they repeated their statement. He brought them into town and gave them shelter for the night.

The headman arranged a deer shoot with the two convicts who had guns and next morning shortly after they had gone shots were heard, but believing their companions and the Goung were firing at deer the three convicts left behind them nothing of it until some time afterward four Burman policemen entered the hut. The three convicts then learned that Po Lu and Nga Pya had been shot and were themselves arrested. The headman appears to have been in communication with the police from the beginning.

WONDERS OF SURGERY.

Voin of a Live Sheep Transplanted to Man's Leg.

An extraordinary surgical operation is reported from Paris, France. Dr. Doyen, who is known in connection with cancer research, successfully transplanted a vein of a live sheep to the leg of a man suffering from arterial aneurism, with the result that the circulation was restored. The patient has now completely recovered. The vein transferred was a fraction over 10 inches in length. Numerous grafting operations have been performed in modern surgery, but this is the first time that an organism from a lower animal has been transferred to man. Dr. Doyen is now in Budapest attending the medical congress, to which he will communicate the details of the operation.

THEIR BROTHERS' KEEPERS.

Chinese procedure in criminal matters is distinctly interesting. Every man is held responsible for any crime he has personally committed; but, if he prefers it, the criminal can take his punishment by proxy. If a man commits a murder, and flies the country, no serious attempt is made to pursue him. Instead, the law comes down on any convenient member of his family who has remained in the neighborhood, and punishes that member in lieu of the real culprit. To Western ways of thinking, this may appear rather an old proceeding; but, as the Chinese religion inflicts everlasting torments on the soul of the man who deserts his family in the hour of need, the system is not without its merits. Anyway, the scheme works well in practice, and the fugitive is generally sufficiently honorable to return in time.

THE MYSTERIOUS KEY

OR, PLANNING FOR THE FUTURE.

CHAPTER XXI.—(Cont'd)

Accordingly, that very evening, Allison and Lady Bromley were consulted as to the plan, and both heartily seconded it, greatly to the young lover's gratification, whereupon there followed an earnest consultation regarding ways and means and time.

"How long will it take you ladies to make the necessary arrangements?" the young man inquired.

"That will depend somewhat upon your own and Allison's wishes regarding the matter," Lady Bromley smilingly observed. "Do you want a wedding—I mean a society affair?"

Gerald glanced at Allison, who smiled, flushed, and then shook her pretty head with a somewhat doubtful air.

He understood her. She was not quite sure whether she ought to wish for a brilliant wedding, such as young ladies in her circle usually aspired to. She was no longer Miss Brewster, the heiress, although practically her position was unchanged. Then, Mr. Brewster had been dead only a little over a year, and she was not out of mourning, although gradually lightening the sombre hues which she had hitherto worn. This was something of what he read in her expressive face and hesitation of manner. But knowing how all the fondest hopes of the banker had been centred in this beautiful girl, knowing that he had never denied her a wish from her infancy up, and that he would have spared no effort or expense to make her marriage the one important event in her life, Gerald felt that due respect ought to be paid to what he believed he would have desired, as well as to the expectations of society in general.

"It is customary for the bride to have her say upon a question of that nature, I believe," he smilingly observed, after considering for a few moments; "but if I may be allowed, I would like to express myself freely, and then you can do as you like."

"Certainly you may be allowed, and I am sure that Allison will be glad to know your preference in the matter," said Lady Bromley.

"Indeed, I would," asserted the fair bride-elect eagerly. "I should be glad to shift the responsibility of the whole affair upon his shoulders."

"Well then," returned her lover, his fond eyes fastened upon her face, that he might catch its every varying expression. "I think there ought to be a wedding—not too elaborate an affair, perhaps, because of him whom we lost last year, but as near an approach to a society function, such as he would have desired, as may be consistent."

"Gerald, how thoughtful you are! You always say and do just the nicest and most appropriate things," Allison exclaimed, her

CHAPTER XXII.

Mrs. Manning and her children, with whom Allison had exchanged frequent visits before leaving Boston, were to spend this last month with her—Mr. Manning coming later in season for the wedding—and Mrs. Bryant was to be the guest of Lady Bromley during the week preceding the event.

Thus time flew, and two days previous to the wedding the house was full of happy, congenial people, all deeply interested in the affairs of the lovely bride-elect, especially in the elegant gifts which had been pouring in thick and fast for more than a week, and in the trousseau, which Gerald had privately instructed Lady Bromley must be the daintiest and nicest which her exquisite taste could suggest. On this particular afternoon, the Lytlettons, with Mr. and Mrs. Lyman, had been invited to dine with the family, and after dinner they were all gathered in the drawing-room, a jolly, happy company of twelve, when a maid entered, and, going to Allison, informed her that Mademoiselle Fromonte, the modiste, had arrived with a special reception-dress which had been sent home once before, but had to be taken away again for some alterations. Mademoiselle now wished to try it on, to be sure that it was all right before letting it go out of her hands.

"Ah!" said Lady Bromley, who had overheard the message. "I am glad it has come—now everything is complete. Helen, it is that lovely pearl-gray brocade with the rose trimmings that I was telling you about," she added to Mrs. Bryant.

"Oh, Allison, let me go up with you and see it tried on," said that lady, turning eagerly to her. "I've seen all the rest, you know, but this will have to be packed immediately, and I shall miss it otherwise."

"Why cannot we other ladies have the same privilege?" smilingly inquired Mrs. Lyttleton. "We all love pretty things."

"So do the gentlemen, also," Mr. Lyman here piped up, whereupon there was a general laugh at his expense.

"Well, well! Mr. Lyman, I am surprised to find a man of your age so fond of girlish finery," merrily cried Lady Bromley, who was excessively amused. "Allison"—turning gaily to her—"there is but one thing for you to do; go up and let Mademoiselle Fromonte put on the robe, then come down and give us all a look at it."

"And make a show-figure of myself!" protested Allison, blushing.

"Oh, we are all friends, and you are an object of special interest just now. Run along, dear, and let us have our way," said Mrs. Lyman coaxingly.

The fair girl tripped away without more ado, but twenty minutes later the portieres parted again came to her side, an eager expression on his face, for he believed they were on the verge of a wonderful revelation.

"Lady Bromley," he observed gravely, "I have told you, and we all know, that Allison was adopted by Mr. and Mrs. Brewster when she was an infant. Since we are practically a family-party, I may safely mention the fact that she was a deserted babe, found by Mrs. Brewster's sister. That golden key was pinned upon her dress, and—"

Gerald was suddenly cut short at this point by the strange behavior of Lady Bromley, who fell upon her knees beside Allison, and, winding her arms around her slender, graceful form, bowed her head upon her neck and sobbed brokenly.

"Found! Oh, my darling, I have found you at last! What a blessed release from the cruel bondage in which I have lived all my life! For years I have carried a crushed and bleeding heart in my breast, for almost a quarter of a century I have struggled and fought with a guilty conscience."

She paused, utterly overpowered, her tears flowing like rain, while Mrs. Bryant betrayed almost equal emotion. Allison, however, was strangely calm, and her face, though pale, was illumined by some intense inward joy.

"Gerald," she said as she lifted her shining eyes to him, at the same time throwing her right arm around the form of the kneeling, weeping woman, "she is my mother."

Before the young man could respond, Mr. Lyttleton came to his sister's side, his countenance wearing a somewhat stern, but woolly puzzled expression.

"Mabel!" he exclaimed somewhat sharply. "What in the name of all that's mysterious is the meaning of this strange scene and your wild utterances? You are conducting yourself in the most unaccountable manner, while there appears to be some important secret which you and Mrs. Bryant share, but which is not apparent to the rest of us. I think you would do well to calm yourself and give an explanation."

His tone did more toward producing this result than any other treatment could have done.

Lady Bromley immediately arose and turned to confront her brother, but with an air of dignity which at once assured him that whatever the nature of her secret, she had it in her power to explain everything to his entire satisfaction.

She did not move from Allison's side, however. She had clasped one of her hands in hers, and now stood there clinging to it while she replied to Mr. Lyttleton.

"Richard," she said, meeting his glance calmly, while there was a ring of gladness in her tones which he had not heard in them since her girlhood, "the secret of more than twenty years is a secret no longer. For this dear girl is my daughter!"

"Mabel, are you crazy?" cried the startled man, and regarding her as if he really feared that her reason had suddenly been deranged.

"No, it is apparent that you are thunderstruck at the revelation," she returned, with a nervous laugh, "but what I have told you is true, and Helen can prove the statement."

"But, Mabel, you have always said that you had no children," her brother sternly replied.

NERVOUS DISORDERS

Promptly Cured by the Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

If your hand trembles or is unsteady, remember that this is a sure and early sign of your nervous system being at fault. The mischief may develop slowly to a worse stage. You feel unaccountably weak and weary after exertion; you lose flesh; you turn against food and suffer palpitations and indigestion after eating. At times you are intensely irritable, greatly depressed and easily worried. Sometimes sharp pains shoot down your spine and legs and probably neuralgia robs you of your sleep at night. These are some of the troubles that indicate the presence of nervous disorders. If these troubles are neglected they result in complete nervous collapse and possibly paralysis. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have won a great reputation by curing all forms of nervous disease. The nervous system depends entirely upon the blood supply for nourishment; when the blood is thin and weak the nerves are affected as described. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually increase the supply of good red blood, feed, strengthen and tone the nerves, enable them to perform their functions and dispel all signs of a breakdown.

Mrs. Jas. H. Ward, Lord's Cove, N. B., says: "About two years ago I suffered so much from nervous prostration that I was little better than a helpless wreck. I suffered from headaches and a constant feeling of dizziness. The least unusual move would startle me and set my heart palpitating violently. I had little or no appetite, and grew so weak that I was hardly able to drag myself about, and could not do my housework. In every way I was in a deplorable condition. As the medicine I had been taking seemed to do me no good, my husband got a supply of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I had only been taking the Pills for a couple of weeks, when I seemed to feel somewhat better, and this encouraged me to continue the treatment. From that on my strength gradually but surely returned, and in the course of a few more weeks I was once more a well woman, able to do my own housework and feeling better than I had done for years. I have since remained well and feel that I owe my good health to the healing powers of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

Every other weak, sickly, worn out, nervous person should follow the example of Mrs. Ward and give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial. These Pills will send new blood coursing through the veins and bring brightness and energy to the weak and despondent. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

BIRTH RATE IN FRANCE.

Dr. Bertillon Makes an Interesting Analysis of Returns.

Statistics just published by Dr. Jacques Bertillon, the chief of the Municipal Statistics Office, cast an instructive sidelight on the shrinkage in the French birthrate. Taking 445 prominent married Parisians, Dr. Bertillon finds they have a total of 575 children. These 445 men he divides into three categories:

there ought to be a wedding, perhaps, because of him whom we lost last year, but as near an approach to a society function, such as he would have desired, as may be consistent."

"Gerald, how thoughtful you are! You always say and do just the nicest and most appropriate things," Allison exclaimed, her face glowing with pleasure, yet with a thrill of emotion in her tones, as her thoughts reverted to her father and how she would miss him in the coming festivities.

"And Allison," he continued, "I want you to be married from your old home, just the same as if everything had remained unchanged. Mr. Lyttleton thinks we must sail about the middle of April—that will give you fully two months, which ought to be time enough, with sufficient help, to do everything in a proper and becoming manner. My plan is this—to have the old house opened, and you, with Lady Bromley to matronize you, take up your abode there at once. I will advertise for your old housekeeper, Mrs. Pollard, and if she can be found I know that she will be delighted to resume her former position, and will soon have everything in apple-pie order for you. What do you say, dear?"

But Allison could not reply to this. The thought of going back to the dear old home, which she had believed lost to her forever—of planning for her marriage beneath its friendly shelter, and surrounded by familiar and well-beloved objects, around which clustered so many tender memories, aroused emotions which she found it difficult to master. Lady Bromley, seeing how near she was to breaking down, hastened to fill the gap.

"It will be just the nicest arrangement in the world," she said brightly, "and it is so like you to think of it, Gerald. I am sure, too, that your suggestion with reference to a wedding is the right and proper thing to do—just what your father would have wished. Allison, and I know you will be happy to be at home once more."

"Indeed, yes," was all that the agitated girl could say; but she slipped her hand into Gerald's, at the same time lifting to him a look which told him more plainly than words how grateful she was to have everything so delightfully arranged for her.

Mrs. Pollard was advertised for the very next day, and on the second morning afterward presented herself in Lady Bromley's apartments, where she was almost everywhere upon meeting Allison and learning what was wanted of her.

In a week's time the house was in perfect order and everything running as smoothly and methodically as when Mr. Brewster was living, the only thing lacking to make the home life complete being his genial presence. Lady Bromley, however, brightened the home with her charming personality, and, throwing herself vigorously into the work before her, soon had the satisfaction of seeing Allison absorbed in matters pertaining to her trousseau, to the exclusion of all that was sad or depressing.

Gerald established himself in handsome lodgings nearby, where he could drop in upon them whenever he felt inclined, and every passing day only served to make life seem brighter to them all.

At the end of a month cards were issued announcing the approaching marriage, and inviting a long list of friends to be present at the nuptials and reception following.

"And make a show-figure of myself!" protested Allison, blushing. "Oh, we are all friends, and you are an object of special interest just now. Run along, dear, and let us have our way," said Mrs. Lyman coaxingly.

The fair girl tripped away without more ado, but twenty minutes later the portieres parted again to reveal a vision of loveliness which brought an exclamation of delight to every lip, a look of fond admiration to every eye.

Mrs. Bryant sprang forward to meet her, clasped her by the hand, and drew her forward to the centre of the room, directly beneath the chandelier, her delighted eyes feasting themselves upon the beauty before her.

But suddenly she stopped short, her figure grew rigid as marble, her face grew pale as death, a wild, frightened look sweeping over her features; then, with a shriek that froze the blood of every listener, she threw up her hands and fell senseless into the arms of Gerald, who sprang forward to catch her.

The whole company was thrown into the greatest excitement by this unexpected and alarming occurrence. Lady Bromley fell upon her knees beside her friend, her face betraying great anxiety and distress.

"What could have caused such an attack?" she murmured apprehensively. "Open the windows, somebody, so that she may have plenty of air."

Mr. Lyttleton sprang to obey her, and throwing open a sash, the cool evening air swept refreshingly into the apartment, and the unconscious woman began to revive almost immediately. She soon sat up, and looked around the room in search of Allison.

The girl was sitting at the foot of the sofa, and was regarding her guest with an expression of fear and anxiety. It seemed to her that she could not bear to have her wedding marred by a single untoward event.

"Oh, was it all a dream?" cried Mrs. Bryant, trying to rise to her feet as her glance fell upon the young girl.

"Was what a dream, Helen?" inquired Lady Bromley. "What was it that shocked you so?" Why did you faint?"

Mrs. Bryant did not reply. Her attention seemed all concentrated upon Allison, toward whom she tottered weakly, and, bending over her, clutched eagerly at something upon her neck.

"No, no! I did not dream it!" she cried, shivering from head to foot. "Mabel! Mabel! Look! look!" and holding up the object which she had seized with one hand, she pointed at it with the other to attract Lady Bromley's attention. It was the golden key which was Allison's only heritage, save that of love.

Around her throat was clasped the delicate chain with the key suspended from it.

Lady Bromley went quickly to Allison to ascertain what had so excited her friend. The effect produced upon her as she caught sight of the golden key was scarcely less remarkable than that exhibited by her friend.

"Heavens!" she exclaimed wildly and with ashen lips, while she grasped Allison by the arm. "Where did you get it?"

The startled heart of the girl leaped into her throat at the question, and she could make no reply. She turned a troubled, appealing look upon Gerald, who instantly ous laugh, but what I have to tell you is true, and Helen can prove the statement."

"But, Mabel, you have always said that you had no children," her brother sternly replied.

"And I spoke no falsehood, for fate and my own unpardonable rashness conspired to rob me of the only treasure that I ever had," said the agitated woman, in a tone of anguish.

"Explain yourself, if you please," commanded Mr. Lyttleton. "Here take this chair," he added more gently, as he rolled one to her side. "Sit down, everybody, while we have this remarkable denunciation elucidated; for"—straightening himself with an energetic movement, a swift look of triumph sweeping over his features—"upon the proof of my sister's assertion there hangs a fortune."

Gerald started violently at his words, and comprehended at once that if it could be proved that Allison was the daughter of Sir Charles and Lady Bromley, there would be no further difficulty about settling the long-contested and complicated "Bromley Case." The appearance of a direct heir was all that was needed to bring it to a speedy issue.

HIS NOT TO REASON WHY.

His But to Do as He was Told Though Profits Dwindled.

A story is told of the Rothschilds to illustrate the strict obedience which they at times exacted from their employees, high and low.

They once had an agent in New Orleans, a young and alert fellow who kept his eyes and ears open. According to System, they telegraphed him to sell their cotton holdings on a specified day.

Believing that he had better information on the local market than his employers he held the sale over four days and netted an extra profit of $40,000. He promptly notified the Rothschilds of his achievement and forwarded the bonus. The Rothschilds returned the amount intact with a cold note than rain.

"The $40,000 you made by disobeying our instructions is not ours but yours. Take it. Your successor sails for New Orleans to-day."

PROOF POSITIVE.

A poor laborer was charged with a petty offence. "Have you anyone in court who will vouch for your good character?" said the judge.

"Yes, sir; there is the Chief Constable."

The Chief Constable was amazed. "Why, your honor, I don't even know the man," protested he.

"Now, sir," broke in the culprit, "I have lived in the village for twenty years, and if the Chief Constable doesn't know me yet, isn't that a character for you?"

I have taken six boxes of Gin Pills altogether, but got no relief before I had taken that amount. I had to get up some nights every fifteen minutes and had to use an instrument before I could urinate. Now I can lie in bed four or five hours without getting up.

Statistics just published by Dr. Jacques Bertillon, the chief of the Municipal Statistics Office, cast an instructive sidelight on the shrinkage in the French birthrate. Taking 445 prominent married Parisians, Dr. Bertillon finds they have a total of 575 children. These 445 men he divides into three categories—artistic, literary, and political.

The persons in the first category—94 in number—have 104 children. Included in it are 35 artistic persons who have no children at all. The second category—literature, 133 in number—have 127 children, and included in the class are 65 writers who have no children. In the third category fall 111 politicians, who have in all 193 children. Exactly one-third of the political group are childless.

Finally there are 23 merchants and manufacturers with 39 children, 33 military men and functionaries with 54 children and 51 other notabilities with 56 children. France, says Dr. Bertillon in conclusion, is marching rapidly to her ruin, because she follows the example of those very people whose duty it is to instruct and advise her.

ROSY-CHEEKED BABIES.

Nothing in the world is such a comfort and joy as a healthy, rosy-cheeked, happy baby. But the price of Baby's health is constant vigilance on the part of the mother. The ill of babyhood come suddenly and the wise mother will always be in a position to treat them at once. No other medicine can take the place of Baby's Own Tablets in relieving and curing the ill of babyhood and childhood, and there is no other medicine as safe. Mrs. Wm. Viggers, Perretton, Ont., says:—"My baby was troubled with his stomach and was very cross while getting his teeth, and did not sleep well at night. I gave him Baby's Own Tablets with the best of results. He is now one of the best natured babies one could wish." "MAN OVERBOARD"

Given anything like recent weather, one of the large lifeboats that swing from davits sixty feet above the sea on board an ocean liner can be lowered, with its crew, and get away from the ship inside two minutes. Life-saving in mid-ocean is a speedy business. In one instance, a man had fallen from a liner while she was speeding fourteen knots. The alarm was sounded, a boat lowered, and the swimmer rescued, after a considerable row back over the course to where he was floundering about. The crew had the rescued individual back to the ship, with the boat in its chocks, in just seventeen minutes. A steamship of 10,000 tons, when going at full speed, has momentum sufficient to carry her at least two miles after the engines are stopped. Lifeboat crews, therefore, frequently have their work cut out for them while going to a rescue before their vessel has been stopped.

BEEF TYPE OF CATTLE.

The general appearance of the beef animal, when of correct type shows a distinctly meat-producing form. The animal is compact and broad of back from shoulder points to hips; has a wide, deep body; short and somewhat thick neck; wide, deep full bosom; rather broad, thick, fleshy hind quarters; and a generally deep, wide body. Viewed from one side, the top and bottom line of body run rather parallel with the back quite level. From front or rear the outline should be rather full and broad. Cattle of this type are referred to as "blocky" indicating compactness and neatness of form. If the body is inclined to be long, it may be termed "rangy," while animals long of leg, showing too little depth and fullness of body, may be termed "leggy."

The head should have a broad, strong muzzle, indicating superior grazing and feeding capacity. The nostrils, when somewhat prominent and large, with a wide nose show ample nasal capacity to supply the lungs with air. A Roman nose sometimes occurs with cattle, but it is neither attractive nor desirable. The distance from the muzzle to the point immediately between the eyes is preferably short, with some curve or "dish," as it is termed, just below the eyes which should be wide apart, large and indicate a gentle temperament. A quiet eye means an easy feeder, while a nervous, restless eye shows an animal unsatisfactory to handle and care for. The forehead, as indicating mental capacity, should be broad and reasonably full. The face and cheeks, in a superior head are full and deep, connected with a rather broad, strong lower jaw. If on the horned type, the horns should not be coarse at the head, but should show plenty of fine texture and quality, and be graceful and of harmonious proportions. An abundance of rather long hair should crown the poll or top of the head. It is very desirable that the ear should be neatly attached to the head, without coarseness, and that is should be of superior quality and neatly pointed and covered with silky hair, with long hair at the edges or tips.

The neck of the beef animal tends to be short, thick and muscular, of medium depth, and should be neatly attached to the head and smoothly blended to the shoulders. The bull at maturity show a neck of more length, with heavier muscles, some arch and a heavy coat of hair. The female will have a shorter, lighter neck, with less thickness and less depth. The steer should have a shorter, thicker, fuller, smoother fleshed neck than the cow. When in perfect pose, with head up, the top line of the neck should be slightly raised above the height of the withers.

The shoulders should extend well into the back, lying smoothly covered with flesh, blending neatly with the body. A high type of shoulder is uniformly covered with flesh from shoulder point to top of withers. Rough angular shoulders, unevenly covered, are among the most common defects of cattle.

MAGISTRATE'S SKIN DISEASE CURED

Magistrate F. Rasmussen, of 217, Marquette Street, Montreal, writes to the Zam-Buk Co. as follows:—

"Gentlemen,—For many years I was troubled with a serious eruption of the skin, which was not only unsightly, but at times very painful. I first tried various household remedies, but all these proved altogether useless.

"I then took medical advice. Not one, but several doctors in turn were consulted, but I was unable to get any permanent relief. Some time back I noticed a report from a Justice of the Peace who had been cured of a chronic skin-disease by Zam-Buk, and I determined to give this balm a trial.

"After a thoroughly fair test, I can say I am delighted with it. I have the best reasons for this conclusion; because, while everything else I tried—salves, embrocations, washes, soaps, and doctors' preparations—failed absolutely to relieve my pain and rid me of my trouble, three boxes of Zam-Buk have worked a complete cure.

"In my opinion Zam-Buk should be even more widely known than it is, and I have no objection to your publishing this letter."

For eczema, eruptions, rashes, tetter, it, ringworm, and similar skin diseases, Zam-Buk is without equal. It also cures cuts, burns, scalds, piles, abscesses, chronic sores, blood-poisoning, etc. All druggists and stores at 50 cents a box, or post free for price from the Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

IN LOVE WITH PICTURE.

Portrait Has Strange Influence Over an Old Gentleman.

An elderly Frenchman of distinguished appearance has for a fortnight past been a daily visitor to the Anglo-French exhibition in Paris of 100 portraits of beautiful women of the eighteenth century, passing hours in admiration of a portrait by Boucher, of Jeanne Marquise de Pompadour, lent to the exhibition by the Edinburgh National Gallery.

He appears to have fallen in love with the picture, for the other day he came with a large bouquet of corn-flowers, and to the astonishment of other visitors fell on his knees before the painting, exclaiming, as he held the bouquet aloft: "Oh, darling Jeanne, at last I have found you. Come to me, come!"

With great trouble the attendants induced him to accompany them to the office, where he was detained until his relatives arrived in a motor car and took him away.

Very many persons die annually from cholera and kindred summer complaints, who might have been saved if proper remedies had been used. If attacked do not delay in

NEW CANCER HOSPITAL.

Harry Barnato Left $1,250,000 for the Purpose.

London, England, is to have a new cancer hospital, built and endowed at a cost of $1,250,000, with which to carry on the fight against the dread disease.

It will be remembered that the late Mr. Harry Barnato left by will the splendid sum of $1,250,000 for the purpose of founding some charity in the nature of a hospital or kindred institution in commemoration of his brother, Mr. Barney Barnato, and his nephew, Mr. Woolf Joel.

After full and careful consideration of the merits of the many schemes put before them the trustees, Mr. S. B. Joel, Mr. J. B. Joel and Mr. S. G. Asher, have now decided upon applying it to the building and endowment of an institution for the reception of cancer patients.

With a view to increasing the potentialities of the bequest the new institution will be administered, except as regards its finance, in connection with the Middlesex Hospital, which has acquired so high a reputation for its treatment of patients afflicted with this disease, and the trustees have procured a suitable site in Nassau street adjoining this hospital's special cancer wards.

The trustees, with Prince Francis of Teck, Lord Cheylesmore, Sir John Purcell, and Mr. Felix Davis, will form the committee which has been entrusted with the task of carrying out the laudable and beneficent project.

The authorities of the Middlesex Hospital will not be relieved in the slightest degree of their financial responsibility in connection with their cancer department as at present constituted. The whole of the capital derived from the Barnato bequest will be employed in further charitable operations, and the maintenance of whatever additional accommodation is provided will be assured by adequate endowment.

A REMARKABLE DEMONSTRATION.

Of the many magnificent features at the Toronto Exhibition this year none was more remarkable nor created more genuine interest than the demonstration of the "Nugget" Shoe Polishes in the Main Building.

The demonstrator polished a shoe with the "Nugget" Polish and immediately afterwards washed it. The water ran off the shoe "like water off a duck's back," and the shine was not destroyed, which proves that "Nugget" is a waterproof polish. The shoe was then wiped on a clean towel, but the polish did not rub off and soil the towel, which is conclusive evidence that it will not come off on the clothes in wet weather.

The "Nugget" is a leather preservative which will double the life of your shoes. It keeps the leather soft and pliable preventing the shoe from cracking. Millions use it all over the civilized world. Try it, and its superior qualities will be self-evident. At all dealers, 10c per tin, Black or Tan.

RRR
Cough Syrup
When one is "coughed through," or suffers from Rheumatic Pains, Sore Throat, Lumbago, Toothache, Neuritis, Sciatica, Pneumonia, Tonsillitis, Inflammation of the Bronchial Tubes, Bowels or Lungs, Cramps, Sore Muscles, or Pains of any kind, use RRR Cough Syrup. Ready Relief.

FISHING MADE EASY.

The average amateur fisherman uses line and hook, but, pleasant as his task is, it is not half so profitable as the system formerly in use in the Bay of Fundy, between Nova Scotia and the Canadian mainland. The tide runs high in this inlet, 100 miles long, and the fish used to follow it inland, up the smaller side-openings. Then the fishermen spread nets over these smaller bays, and when the tide had ebbed they waded in, and collected the fish by the hundred from the wide stretches of water one foot in depth. A pair of rubber boots and a basket were all the equipment needed to secure a fine haul of fish.

Trial is Inexpensive.—To those who suffer from dyspepsia, indigestion, rheumatism or any ailment arising from derangement of the digestive system, a trial of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills is recommended, should the sufferer be unacquainted with them. The trial will be inexpensive and the result will be another customer for this excellent medicine. So effective is their action that many cures can certainly be traced to their use where other pills have proved ineffective.

Schoolmaster—"Now tell me what were the thoughts that passed through Sir Isaac Newton's mind when the apple fell on his head." Hopeful Pupil—"I expects he was awful glad it wasn't a brick."

up, the top line of the neck should be slightly raised above the height of the withers.

The shoulders should extend well into the back, lying smoothly covered with flesh, blending neatly with the body. A high type of shoulder is uniformly covered with flesh from shoulder point to top of withers. Rough angular shoulders, unevenly covered, are among the most common defects of cattle. A prominent shoulder also emphasizes the development behind it.

The breast and chest are most important. The former should be carried well forward and be broad and full in the bosom. As one stands and views a beef bull in show form, a great breadth of breast and strength of brisket meets the eye. Sometimes the breast and chest have great depth and the brisket comes within fifteen inches of the level of the foot. Viewed from one side it may curve forward like the prow of a ship. With the cow considerable bosom may show, but not in so great a degree, and with less breadth and feminine outline. The chest which lies between the shoulders and just back of them should be full at the crops, showing much spring of rib and also well filled out in the front flanks. The most beautiful front on the beef animal no matter whether bull, cow or steer, is a smoothly laid, well fleshed shoulder, with a strong arch of rib behind, leaving little or no depression. Much depression behind the shoulders or a narrow, contracted, low chest indicates lack of constitution.—Plumb's Types and Breeds of Farm Animals.

The average married man would almost as soon kiss his wife's mother as pay his church dues.

A THING WORTH KNOWING is the fact that Painkiller finds more uses in a household than any other remedy. For all bowel complaints. Externally for cuts and wounds. Avoid substitutes, there is but one "Painkiller"—Ferry Davis—25c. and 50c.

Master—"How was this vase smashed, Mary?" Mary—"If you please, sir, it tumbled down and broke, itself." Master—"Humph! The automatic brake again!"

NOT EXACTLY PLEASED.

"I suppose you're glad you have a baby brother," asked the neighbor.

"Not exactly. You see," answered the 9-year-old girl. "I've figured it all out that when I'm old enough to have a bean, he'll be just old enough to be a nuisance."

Very many persons die annually from cholera and kindred summer complaints, who might have been saved if proper remedies had been used. If attacked do not delay in getting a bottle of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial, the medicine that never fails to effect a cure. Those who have used it say it acts promptly, and thoroughly subdues the pain and disease.

"I suppose you have always lived round here?" remarked a tourist to an aged inhabitant of a village. "Oh, no," replied the native. "I was born a good half-mile away."

If every housekeeper would use Wilson's Fly Pads freely during the Summer months the house fly peril would soon be a thing of the past.

Bashful Youth—"Miss Bella, does—does your mother object to my coming here so much?" Fair Charmer—"Oh, I think not. I heard her telling papa the other evening that you merely came to pass away the time—you didn't mean anything serious."

Ignorance is a Curse—"Know thyself" is a good admonition, whether referring to one's physical condition or moral habits. The man who is acquainted with himself will know how to act when any disarrangement in his condition manifests itself. Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil is a cheap and simple remedy for the eradication of pain from the system and for the cure of all bronchial troubles.

BECAUSE OF ONE.

Because of one dear infant head
With golden hair.
To me all little heads
A halo wear;
And for one saintly face
All babes are fair.

Because of two wide, earnest eyes
Of heavenly blue,
Which look, with yearning gaze,
My sad soul through,
Ah eyes now fill mine own with tears
Whate'er their hue.

Because of little death-marked lips
Which once did call
My name in plaintive tones,
No voices fall
Upon my ear in vain appeal
From children small.

Two little hands held in my own.
Long, long ago.
Now cause me as I wander through
This world of woe
To clasp each baby hand stretched out
In fear of foe.

"Do you like a brass band?" he asked, as they were listening to the music in the park. "Oh, yes," she said; "a brass band is very nice, but I think I would rather have a gold one."

Practically all Canadian druggists, grocers and general dealers sell Wilson's Fly Pads. If your storekeeper does not, ask him why.

A recruit was being shown the use of the rifle, and, after firing seven shots at the target which all missed, the instructor, in a rage, shouted, "Here is another cartridge. Go behind that waggon and shoot yourself!" In a few minutes the recruit came back from behind the waggon, and coolly announced, "I'm sorry, sir, but it's another miss."

These Pills Cure Rheumatism.—To the many who suffer from rheumatism a trial of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills is recommended. They have pronounced action upon the liver and kidneys and by regulating the action of these organs act as an alternative in preventing the admixture of acid and blood that causes this painful disorder. They must be taken according to directions and used steadily and they will speedily give evidence of their beneficial effects.

The Banker's Wife—"Give me a loan of your handkerchief, John." The Banker (absent-mindedly)—"Wait a bit. What security have you got to offer?"

BE SURE YOU GET THE KIND YOU HAVE ALWAYS HAD.—Owing to the great popularity of "The D. & L." Menthol Plaster unscrupulous makers are putting up one like it. Made by Davis & Lawrence Co.

"I am proud to say that my grandfather made his mark in the world," observed the conceited youth. "Well, I suppose he wasn't the only man in those days who couldn't write his name," replied his bored companion.

It is an undisputed fact that one packet of Wilson's Fly Pads has actually killed a bushel of house flies. Fortunately no such quantity can ever be found in a well kept house, but whether they be few or many Wilson's Fly Pads will kill them all.

Money in Your Pocket.

With The Toronto Daily Star's accurate daily market reports you could sell your grain and live stock at top-notch prices. Half a cent extra on just 300 bushels of wheat or oats would pay a year's subscription. 25c. a hundred weight on a dozen hogs would cover three years' subscriptions.

Don't you, depending on weekly reports, or daily reports that are old when you get them—miss top prices by at least that much several times a year?

A Remarkable Map.

Down at Ottawa they are publishing a map on which in due course will be shown every house, school, church, mill, blacksmith shop, etc., in the Dominion. This tremendous map will be made up of sheets, each of which will take in about 125 square miles. Already some 15,000 square miles have been mapped out along the frontier. A description of the way in which this unique map is being made is to be found in the Busy Man's Magazine for October. All sorts of things will be recorded on it. For instance, all roads, streams and bridges are classified and by contours with a vertical interval of twenty-five feet, the height and shape of every hill is given. Woods and orchards are marked and the density of the trees approximately indicated. Concessions and lots are numbered and a great amount of other valuable information supplied. It is the only map produced in Canada on which the correct names of all places are shown—all doubtful ones having been submitted to the Geographic Board for decision.
